

A LONG AND GOOD LIFE

Mrs. Sylvester King, a Pioneer of Portage County, Dies Near Bowman, North Dakota.

The remains of Mrs. Delilah King arrived here on the limited Soo train last night and were transferred to the Portage branch for shipment to Bancroft on the 10 o'clock train today, where funeral services were held at two o'clock this afternoon, followed by interment in the Lone Pine cemetery. The body was accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. W. O. Bozlee, the lady being a daughter of Mrs. King. Her death occurred at a quarter past five o'clock last Sunday morning and was the direct result of old age. She had been remarkably well and active until a couple of weeks ago.

Delilah Smith was born in Yates county, N. Y., Apr. 11, 1830, making her upwards of 80 years of age. When a girl of 12 years the parents moved to Ft. Hill, Ill., and made their home there for the following eight years. Delilah attended Waukegan Academy during the greater part of this time. She was married 55 years ago to Sylvester King and shortly afterwards they came to Lone Pine, this county, and lived on a farm in Pine Grove township for forty years. Mr. King died in October, 1907. For the next two years the widow made her home with her daughter in this city and then accompanied them west to the vicinity of Bowman, where they took up a homestead. Four children were born to Mr. and Mrs. King, of whom only two survive, Geo. W. King of Midland, Mich., and Mrs. Bozlee. The deceased lady also leaves two brothers, Jas. P. Smith of Long Mound, Col., and Henry Smith of Neillville.

The subject of this sketch was a sincere Christian and devout member of the Methodist church, with which she had been affiliated since childhood, and was greatly esteemed and respected by all who knew her.

ESTEEMED LADY GONE

Mrs. James Isherwood, of the Town of Plover, a Native of Wisconsin. Passes to Her Long Rest.

In the passing of Mrs. Jas. Isherwood, who died at the family homestead in the town of Plover last Saturday night, another of Portage county's best known and most beloved ladies has been called to her reward. Mrs. Isherwood's health had not been of the best for the past several years, in fact since the death of her husband, who passed away Feb. 18, 1904, but the immediate cause of her demise was due to a stroke of paralysis, which she received on Tuesday of last week, and thereafter until she died was confined to her bed, failing rapidly.

The deceased lady was born in Darien, Walworth county, this state, Feb. 5, 1843, and was therefore in the 68th year of her age. Her maiden name was Almirette Taylor and when a girl she came to Portage county with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. E. Taylor. Dec. 5, 1862, she was married to Jas. Isherwood and the following year they purchased the farm south of the village of Plover, which has ever since been the family homestead, and where friends and acquaintances of the family were ever welcome, it being one of the most hospitable homes in Portage county. Mrs. Isherwood was truly a good woman and to know her was but to admire her pure character and love her for her many admirable traits of heart and head. Her work here below has been well done and a reward awaits her beyond. She is survived by her aged mother, Mrs. Geo. E. Taylor, seven children, Miss Clara, Edwin, George, James, Mrs. Jessie Grant and Mrs. Ellen Edwards, all of the town of Plover, and Henry R. Isherwood of Sturgeon Bay. She leaves three brothers, Fred L. and W. D. Taylor of Plover and Frank Taylor of Bowman, N. D., and one sister, Mrs. Albert Myers of this city.

The funeral was held at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon from the residence, Rev. T. W. North of the Methodist church of this city officiating, followed by interment in Plover cemetery.

Those who served as pallbearers were A. E. Bourn, H. A. Mariatt, Nye Simonds, Myron Barker, Hugh McGown, D. J. Hale.

The children were all present, including Henry R. Isherwood and family of Sturgeon Bay, and friends from a distance in attendance included Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Fay and daughter, Hugh McGowan and Henry Edwards, Sr., of Grand Rapids, Mrs. Elmer Youmans of Westboro. Floral offerings were received from the following: Family, roses; Mrs. Myers and daughters, roses; Mesdames Previle, Hodson and Sawyer, carnations; C. J. Fay and family, carnations; Mr. and Mrs. Iverson, carnations; Mrs. Belle Isherwood and family, carnations; Mrs. H. Bourn and Mrs. H. A. Mariatt, carnations; N. Simons and family, asters.

Married at Tomahawk.

Miss Mida Houlehan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Houlehan, and Warren Sutliff, both of Tomahawk, were married a few days ago at the Catholic parsonage in that city. They were attended by Edward Houlehan, Jr., brother of the bride, and Miss Agatha Houlehan, of Hurley, a cousin. Among others present to enjoy the important event was Miss Loretta Mullen of this city, also a cousin of the bride. Following the wedding reception the bridal party spent a few days at Rhineland, Ironwood and Bessemer. They will reside on a farm about six miles from Tomahawk. The bride is well known in Stevens Point, having visited here frequently with relatives and friends.

KICKS GOAL FROM FIELD

Hume Young, Member of Chicago University Eleven, Said to be Star Toe Artist.

The following interesting paragraphs were part of an article about the football eleven of Chicago university in Tuesday morning's Chicago Record-Herald. Hume Young is the elder son of W. S. Young, secretary of the Coyo Furniture Co. and president of the Board of Education.

Kicking skill with goals from the field as a specialty will be Coach A. A. Stagg's chief hope for defeating Illinois in football next Saturday at Urbana, for Chicago's chances to shine in this department looked up yesterday when Hume Young of the varsity squad made his debut as a star toe artist in connection with an improved display by Eberle Wilson, the main booter of the Midway.

The kicking exhibition was the bright spot in an otherwise saddening practice session at Marshall field. The maroon freshmen, using Illinois' plays, defeated the varsity by the score of 12 to 9, Young rounding out the veterans' count by a drop kick from the twenty-yard line.

Young played a creditable game at right end in the final stages of Saturday's fatal game with Indiana, and is expected to start against Illinois, while Wilson also is sure to be in the line-up. The two backs made such a good showing in dropping goals in practice that the maroons took a new lease of life and admitted that Illinois might fall by the air line.

Face and Eyes Burned.

While loading a gun at his home near Dancy, last Sunday, the shell exploded prematurely, and R. L. Scott, a boy about 18 years of age, who was handling the weapon, had his face and eyes quite badly burned with powder and a piece of the shell pierced his chest. He was brought to this city and attended by Dr. Southwick. There will be no permanent bad effects.

CARE OF UNFORTUNATES

What Portage County Will Be Called Upon to Pay for the Past Fiscal Year Ending June 30, 1910.

Portage county will be called upon to pay over $10,000 for the support of its insane and other unfortunates who have been cared for in outside institutions during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1910. The insane patients numbered about 125, while 14 boys were in the industrial school at Waukegan, and there were 2 patients in the state tuberculosis sanatorium at Wales. The amount charged for the care of the last named is $345, and for the Waukegan institution $906.80, while bills for the care of the insane, most of whom are among the incurables and have been transferred to various county institutions, have been received by the county clerk as follows, being an increase of $427.28 over last year:

Fond du Lac.....$17.08

Columbia.....18.20

In this connection it might be thought to suggest to the county board that the question of preparing for the erection of a county asylum in the near future, could be considered at the coming session.

TEN ACRES TO HOSPITAL HAVE A GOOD BALANCE

Council Votes to Sell Tract of Land in Eastern Suburb for Sum of One Dollar.

The council met in special meeting last Friday evening. Mayor Walters presiding, and with the following present: Abb, Altenburg, Cook, Heffron, Port, Redfield, Schenk and Urowski. Mayor Walters mentioned the fact that there is a large quantity of boulders and crushed rock scattered about the quarry on the West Side, where the crusher has been in operation, and recommended that all be gathered up and crushed so that they can be used on streets still to be improved this fall, including certain work on Clark and Division streets and the Jordan road. He also spoke of the improvements on the paper mill road, where cinders are being placed, and said that much good could be done with the use of a King drag, not only on that road, but on N. Second street, Water street and Center avenue. The mud on Main street and Strong's avenue should also be scraped off and the streets put in a more sanitary condition, as both thoroughfares are generally in bad condition after a rain.

The main matter to be brought before the council at this time was the transferring or donating of a ten acre tract of land at the east boundary line of the city to the City Hospital Association. Ald. Abb moved that the ten acres be sold to the Association for the sum of $1, the same to be used for hospital purposes, and that the mayor, comptroller and clerk be authorized to sign the transfer papers; that the property be transferred when the Hospital Association has sufficient funds to erect a hospital building. The motion was upon roll call unanimously adopted. Dr. von Neumann, president of the Association, thanked the council for their generous action.

Ald. Abb moved that the board of public works attend to the street improvements as outlined by the mayor, as soon as the work can be done. Motion carried.

Ald. Urowski said that some of the water connections with the main on N. Second street are giving much trouble to property owners, and the water also comes up and overflows the street. The parties who made the connections are no doubt responsible for this trouble. T. E. Cauley stated that owing to the clay condition of the soil, extra care should be taken in doing this kind of work and the "goose-necks" should be blocked up. It was further recommended that plumbers who do this class of work should be required to put up a bond and that the city attorney should prepare an ordinance to this effect. Ald. Redfield moved that the board of public works ascertain who did the work on N. Second street and not allow them to do any more work until repairs are satisfactorily made. The motion was carried and the council adjourned.

An Ornament to N. Third Street.

Work is now practically completed on the brick block erected by J. Iverson on N. Third street, between Main and Normal avenue. The lower floor is divided into three rooms, each 20x40 feet, the center one of which will be used by the owner for the display of pianos, organs and sewing machines. Six months ago Mr. Iverson made a proposition to the mayor and aldermen to lease one of the lower rooms as an office for the city clerk and treasurer and the hall upstairs as a council chamber. The offer has not been acted upon as yet as the lease of the present quarters does not expire until Jan. 1st. The new Iverson block replaces several old rookeries which had long been an eyesore.

Will Have Concrete Foundation.

A crew of 34 men under Foreman H. H. Young is now employed in loading sand onto cars for shipment to Marshfield, where the Soo company is doing considerable filling. This earth was excavated from the site of the new addition to the roundhouse, the foundation for which will be of cement and it is expected that the automatic mixer will be started up tomorrow. This machine has an enormous capacity, being able to mix 300 sacks or 60,000 pounds per day. Mr. Young's force will be increased this week to 50 men. He estimates that the concrete work will take a month to complete and the balance of the job only a few days. The new roundhouse will contain nine stalls in addition to the six smaller ones which are left standing.

Bouillon-Clifford Nuptial.

On Tuesday morning, Oct. 4th, at 10 o'clock Miss Mamie Clifford and Eugene Bouillon were married at "Our Lady of God Help" cathedral, Seattle, Wash., and shortly after left on a wedding tour to Portland, Oregon, where they spent a week. They are now at home at Kent, Wash. Besides the family of the bride's sister, Mrs. W. R. Smith, other former Stevens Pointers who witnessed the marriage ceremony were A. M. Fox and son, Clifford Fox, relatives of the bride, the first named gentleman having been one of the sponsors at her baptism. The bride was attired in a brown traveling suit, with a large picture hat trimmed with brown plumes shading into champagne color.

Mrs. Bouillon is a daughter of Mrs. M. Clifford of this city and left here two years ago last September to make her home with her sister, Mrs. Smith at Kent and to accept a position as stenographer with the law firm of McLean & Balliet in Seattle. She is a graduate of our High school, class of '07, and also finished a course at Stevens Point business college. The groom is a rising young civil engineer and is a resident of Kent.

School Board Treasury in Good Condition—Short But Busy Session of That Body.

All members of the board of education with the exception of Frank E. Boyer, were present at the monthly meeting held Monday evening. The committee on teachers reported that Miss Nina Chenevert had been transferred to the Third ward school, where she is acting as principal, and is entitled to a salary of $50 per month. Upon motion of R. A. Cook the clerk was authorized to issue her order for that amount.

Miss Clara Means, commercial teacher at the High school, asked that a total of six machines, and also wanted a letter press book, together with carbon paper and typewriter paper. The superintendent said that there are now more than forty in the first class in that department, with six pupils in the advanced class and there would be still more after Christmas. Upon motion of W. J. Shumway the clerk was authorized to purchase another typewriter.

Bids for furnishing lumber to the manual training department were received from the Vetter Manfg. Co. for $78.50 and from the Week Lumber Co. for $81.25. Some items were omitted from the latter company's bid, but it was shown to be the lowest and the contract was awarded to them.

Mr. Simonson recommended that an assistant janitor be engaged at the High school and that Herbert Neitzel, one of the pupils, be secured for that position, he being willing to work for $10 per month. Dr. Pasternacki deemed this salary too low and moved that it be fixed at $15 per month, but Mr. Anderson moved an amendment making the salary $19 for the present and that it be raised later, when there will be more work to do, if necessary. The amendment was adopted.

Mr. Cook recommended that the lockers that are needed by the Athletic Association be of the kind that can be moved from place to place instead of having stationary lockers constructed of wood. Supt. Davis said that he had received a price list of double steel lockers and that a sufficient number can be secured at a cost of about $30 net. Action upon this matter was deferred until the next meeting.

The clerk reported that the closets at the High school should be disinfected, but the superintendent said that the fault was due only to a lack of water that is supplied by the Water Co., and that he considered them very unreasonable in the way that they supply the building. He said if it was a personal matter with him he would compel the company to put in another pipe within ten days. Mr. Young said that P. M. Adams, the plumber, had told him that he could secure taps for the Third ward building from the Water Co., but they had refused to supply more taps for the High school, as they thought the trouble was in an obstruction in the pipe leading into the building. After more discussion on this subject the superintendent reported that the fair and supper receipts of last Friday amounted to $174 and that they would have about $60 more in the treasury after all bills thus far contracted by the Association are paid. Mr. Simonson said that there are boys now at work on wood wagons who should be in school, but as these probably have a permit and the city has no truant officer, no action was taken.

Treas. Anderson made the following report, which was placed on file, after which the board adjourned:

Fire This Forenoon.

A fire that started in the roof of the wing part of a residence at the corner of Center avenue and Dixon street, owned by Chas. F. Martin and occupied by his brother, Guy, and family, caused much damage this forenoon. It was discovered at about 11 o'clock, at which time it had already gained considerable headway, spreading to the main part of the dwelling. Hoe company No. 2 was on the ground in good time, but for some unexplainable reason No. 1 was not called, but turned out after some member incidentally learned that there was a fire in that part of the city. The contents of the dwelling were also damaged by water and smoke. An insurance of $1,250 will possibly cover the loss.

Buildings From Michigan.

M. J. Mersch has been at Choate, Mich., for the past several days, where he is engaged in dismantling a number of buildings purchased from the Choate Lumber Co. by J. J. Heffron of this city. Choate was a lumbering town, but the pine timber has been cut away and all the buildings are practically abandoned. The structures include a 34x100 three-story boarding house and 31 cottage residences. The material from a few of the latter will be brought to Stevens Point and reconstructed into modern dwellings here, while some of the others will be used on farm lands owned by Mr. Heffron. The latter gentleman will go there next week, accompanied by a couple of other men to assist in tearing down the buildings.

JUST A FAMILY AFFAIR

Sheriff Berry Summoned to the Town of Amherst, but Finds Nothing Serious—Prisoner Discharged.

On Friday last Sheriff Berry was summoned to the town of Amherst, where it was stated that a man had threatened to kill his wife and annihilate several other relatives. Accordingly, the sheriff secured an automobile, and accompanied by Frank Neuberger, drove out to the Jorgenson farm in Amherst, where Leo Snowden, a son-in-law of Jorgenson, was placed under arrest. The prisoner made no protest, saying that he was willing to accompany the officer and denied that he had attempted to molest his wife, but admitted having had some trouble with her relatives, it apparently being a family row. Mrs. Snowden came to the city the next day and wanted her husband examined as to his sanity, but as there was no indication that he is mentally unbalanced, he was allowed to go his way. The woman returned to the home of her parents, but Snowden, who is of Scotch-Irish descent, has determined to remain away and for the present at least will make Stevens Point his home.

Before reaching the Jorgenson place the sheriff had been warned several times to be careful, as Snowden was a bad man, and as powerful as he was bad. The reverse as to his "badness" rather proved the fact.

Married in Minnesota.

The Foley Tribune of last week publishes the marriage of John Corrigan and Mathilda Abfalter, which took place at St. Lawrence's church at Duluth on Sept. 27th, Father Peters officiating. The bride is one of the bright and attractive young ladies of that place, one who possesses all the qualities that go to making a model wife. She is the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Abfalter of Duluth, at whose home a wedding dinner was served to a number of relatives and friends.

The groom is the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Corrigan of Custer. John is a bustling young farmer who is meeting with excellent success in the management of a large farm. To the lady of his choice he will certainly be a good and worthy husband.

He Was Discharged.

Frank Parker, who recently came here from Pittsville and leased the Columbia Hotel at the South Side, in company with his brother, was taken into custody last week and an examination as to his sanity conducted by Drs. Lindores and Smiley. The examining physicians found that he was of unsound mind at the time, but another consultation was held yesterday and it was determined that Parker had fully recovered. He was accordingly discharged by Judge Murat. Parker has severed his connection with the hotel and intends to move to Merrill.

Pioneer Life Recalled.

As predicted in last week's Gazette, Saturday's meeting of the Woman's Club proved peculiarly interesting. It was Pioneer's Day, talks on the early history of Portage county and central Wisconsin being given by John W. Strope and Mrs. J. R. Bunker, and papers along the same line were prepared by H. O. Halverson and Mrs. W. Mitchell. Mr. Halverson's account of the early lumbering days was read by Mrs. N. A. Week.

The opening number was a vocal solo, charmingly rendered by Mrs. T. H. Hay. Both the words and music for this song were composed by Mrs. H. M. Wadleigh. Mrs. Hay was accompanied on the piano by Mrs. W. R. Buckingham. Another treat in the musical line was the piano selection by Miss Mary Collins.

One of the pioneer authors was Mrs. Phillips, wife of the late Dr. John Phillips, who compiled and had published several volumes of prose and poetry. Selections from one of the books were read to the Club ladies by Mrs. C. B. Baker.

J. P. MALICK STRICKEN

Former President of State Bank Received Paralytic Stroke Last Evening and Now in Serious Condition.

While sitting in a chair in the Hotel Sellers office at about a quarter past eight last evening, J. P. Malick received a paralytic stroke which affected his entire left side. Mr. Malick was at once removed to his room in the hotel and physicians called, but he has since been in a partially comatose condition. He was quite restless during the night and today, but apparently suffers no pain, and while he seems to know what is going on about him, is able to speak only a few words at a time. Although his condition is serious, hopes for his ultimate recovery have not been abandoned.

Mr. Malick, who is 66 years of age, has been a resident of Stevens Point for about thirty years, and until a few days ago was president of the Wisconsin State bank. He had not been feeling well of late, and this, together with recent business and financial reverses, which no doubt troubled him greatly, although he seemed about as cheerful as ever when talking with friends, is evidently responsible for his present condition. Mr. Malick for many years has been a leading factor in Stevens Point business circles and enterprises, one of our very best and most progressive citizens, and that he will be spared for years is sincerely hoped.

Hospital Will Get Boost.

The new hospital which the people of Stevens Point propose to erect next season will receive a financial boost on Wednesday and Thursday evenings of this week, when the proprietors of the Ideal and Pastime theaters will contribute the receipts of both evenings toward this fund. Besides furnishing an extra good program in the moving picture line, the management will also provide musical numbers and all who pay ten cents for admission are assured of getting their money's worth. The various details will be looked after by a committee of young ladies of which Miss Loo Mansur is chairman and her assistants are Misses Martha Week, Nellie Lamoreux, Mary Dunegan, Margaret Clifford, Margaret Glenn, Myra Congdon, Katharine Reed, Florence Curran, Anna Dunegan, Clark, Jessie Hawn, Ruth Cate and Anna Clark. Four members of the committee will act as ushers at each of the play houses and some of the others will perform the duties of ticket sellers and takers. Remember the dates, this evening and tomorrow night.

Street concerts will be given both Wednesday and Thursday evenings by the Union band.

Stereopticon and Moving Pictures.

Next Friday evening, Oct. 14th, at 8 o'clock, and Saturday afternoon at 2:30 are the dates, and the basement of St. Paul's Evangelical Lutheran church, corner Center avenue and Center street, is the place where will be held exhibitions of stereopticon views and moving pictures. These entertainments are under the auspices of the Young People's Society and they have provided a program that is both interesting and instructive. An admission fee of 25 cents will be charged adults and 15 cents for children. If you wish to spend a couple of delightful hours attend on one or both dates.

Returns From Montana Prairies.

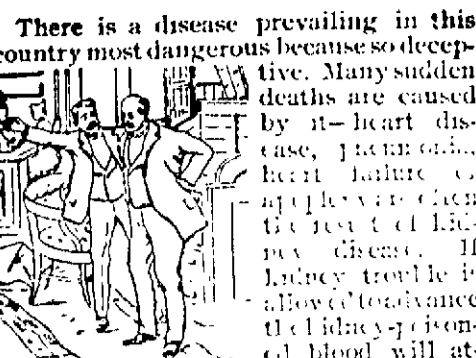

Geo. E. Oster returned the first of the week from Harlem, Montana, to join his family, who arrived from the west a couple of weeks ago and now occupy the Agnew house on Pine and Wisconsin streets. Mr. Oster will leave in a few days for Nowata and other places in Oklahoma with a view to disposing of his interests in oil and other properties. He has taken up a homestead about twenty-five miles from Harlem, on a gently rolling prairie, and is well satisfied with the prospects. Mrs. Mary Hetzel and daughter, Miss Edith, also of this city, have taken adjoining claims and will remain there during the winter.

High School Notes.

Mr. Baldauf spent Saturday in Chicago, going down to see the Chicago-Indiana football game. The Stevens Point High school plays Appleton High school next Saturday. The fair and supper last Friday evening was a great success. Several hundred persons were served with supper, ice cream and cake. Margaret Van Hecke as Rebeccah, stood at the head of the line. A vaudeville was given under the direction of Mr. Bush. A I was some what sitting still. By Bernard Debeck and George Dumas as the Zilsky brothers, act II was a monologue by Gladstone O'Keefe, late of Guilmar Bros' greatest show on earth; then came a song, "I want to be a great big football man." In the ballroom, a farce entitled "Hot water" was given under the direction of Miss Dunning.

The High school football contest with the Normal last Saturday resulted in a no score game. The game was played at three o'clock for a few minutes everything looked dark for the High school. But we suddenly started playing and fought the ball to the five yard line, where the Normal secured control of it. The last two quarters were nothing but see-saw action on the two teams, first one side taking a gain and then the other. The nearest to a score for the Normal was in

The Cause of Many Sudden Deaths.

There is a disease prevailing in this country most dangerous because so deceptive. Many sudden deaths are caused by it—heart disease, pneumonia, heart failure, etc. It is called Swamp-Root. If it is allowed to take hold, it will attack the vital organs, causing catarrh of the bladder, irritable condition of the urine, head aches, back aches, lame back, dizziness, etc. It is a very serious disease, and the kidneys themselves break down and waste away cell by cell.

Swamp-Root corrects and builds up the kidneys, and restores the normal action of the bladder, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often through the day, and to get up many times during the night. The mild and immediate effect of Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy, is soon realized. It stands the highest because of its remarkable health restoring properties. A trial will convince anyone.

Swamp-Root is pleasant to take and is sold by all druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles. You may have a sample bottle and a book that tells all about it, both sent free by mail. Address, Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, and don't let a dealer sell you something in place of Swamp-Root—if you do you will be disappointed.

Civil Service Opportunities.

Positions as employees in the legislature of 1911 will be filled by competitive examinations which will be held throughout the state at the various county seats on Saturday, November 19, 1910. There will also be held on the same date examinations for cadetships to West Point and Annapolis, family officer and matron, greenhouse man, janitor, local assistant to state veterinarian, policeman, proofreader and state agent (parole officer.)

A general competitive examination for stenographers, including several legislative positions will be held during the week beginning Monday, November 21, 1910.

Persons interested should write to the State Civil Service Commission, Madison, Wis., for information and blanks.

Two years ago nearly 800 candidates wrote in the examination for filling the legislative positions, and indications point to a still larger number of candidates this fall.

WILL VOTE ON AMENDMENTS

Voters to Decide Important Questions at the November Election—State to Take Census.

Three amendments to the constitution will be submitted to the voters of the state at the November election, one to do away with the decennial census and providing that the apportionment of legislative districts shall be made upon the basis of the enumeration by the national government; one providing that compensation of members of the legislature shall be $1,000 instead of $500; and a third which authorizes the state to appropriate moneys for the purpose of acquiring, preserving and developing the water power and forests of the state.

The constitutional provision for the enumeration of population requires that it be made every ten years, and the ten year period falls just five years after the decennial census by the national government.

The original constitutional provision for the compensation of members of the legislature was that each should receive $1.50 per day and ten cents per mile, going and coming by the most usual route. In 1867 the constitution was amended providing that the pay should be $350 per year, with the ten cents per mile. In 1881 the pay was again increased to $500 per year.

The third proposal to be submitted is to amend section 10 of article VIII of the constitution. This provision is in effect, that the state shall contract no debt for works of internal improvement or to be a party to the carrying on of such work, etc.

The legislature of 1908 adopted a resolution providing for an amendment to allow appropriations for the purpose of acquiring, preserving and developing the waterpower and the forests of the state.

This last proposal was not passed upon by the last legislature, it being left over to the special session which, it was supposed, would be called sometime during 1910. No special session has been called, but Attorney General Gilbert has held that the question should be submitted as originally contemplated.

If no special session of the present legislature is called then, no matter what the vote is upon the question, the amendment fails. If there should be a special session after the amendment is approved, then it would be a question for the courts to say whether the adoption by the people should stand.

Another New Lodge.

A lodge of the Modern Brotherhood of America, a fraternal organization with a membership of 150,000 in this country, was organized in this city last week by Deputy C. E. Smith, of Wausau, with a charter membership of 40. Officers were chosen as follows:

President—Frank L. Colburn.
Vice Pres.—Earl Field.
Treasurer—John A. Young.
Secretary—Patrick McCarr.
Chaplain—Lovina Field.
Physician—Dr. R. B. Smiley.
Conductor—John A. McGown.
Watchman—Walter Cline.
Sentry—Amiel Heinig.

A Comparison of Republicans.

President Taft now declares that the days of the "pork-barrel" should be numbered, and intimates that another bill of the character of former ones will merit a veto. That is a reform that all but those specially interested can heartily join in. But the President goes on much farther than that, and reads Congress and his party a lesson on the combination of congressmen to secure part of the swag as being "as dangerous to the public weal in certain of its aspects as corruption."

This indictment of Republican legislation is startling, coming from this source, and shows that President Taft sees which way the political wind is blowing and that he is becoming more progressive. In the same speech he further declares: "The evil in the corrupt control of a Congress or a Legislature by private interest is manifest, and always calls for condemnation." It is too bad that the eyes of the President were not open to this log-rolling process—if not corruption—when Aldrich, Payne and Cannon were forcing through the tariff bill which he considered the best tariff law that the Republicans ever enacted, but which he now says must be revised forthwith by piecemeal.

A veto, Mr. President, of the tariff bill which protects the trusts in plundering the people would have everlastingly made your political fortune. The refusal of his constituents to endorse the standpatter Congressman Tawney, whom you especially went to Winona to vouch for, shows that such a veto would have been welcomed, and the increased strength and Democratic victories from Maine to California indicate the same feeling elsewhere.

In extension of the President's signing the tariff bill, it must be said that Mr. Roosevelt during his seven years as President refused to even recommend any tariff legislation, although its crying necessity was just as urgent then as in 1909. The Republican leaders, with but a few notable exceptions, were stalwart standpatters, and Mr. Roosevelt was more subservient to their demands on the tariff and other issues than President Taft has been. The great difference in the attitudes of the two presidents is that while Mr. Roosevelt was loud in proclaiming reform with a large R, he accomplished no reform during his two terms of office, while Mr. Taft in less than two years has done something and seems to be willing to try and do more. He is making a real effort to reduce expenses and extravagant appropriations—something which Mr. Roosevelt never did.

The moral of this story is, that no Republican President seems to be able to divorce himself from the worst element of his party; and whether inclined to stalwartism or insurgentism he finds his hands tied, for both factions declare that "tariff protection is a cardinal principle of the Republican party," and revision of the tariff is only a question of standing still or a slight reduction.

When we hear of a Republican President vetoing an appropriation bill or a tariff bill which a great majority of his party has voted for, we shall know with our eyes shut that the Republican game is about played out.

SOME TARIFF HISTORY.

In a recent address Chas. H. Weiss, Democratic candidate for U. S. senator, told a few facts relative to the passage of the Payne-Aldrich tariff bill which should be known to the voters. He said in part as follows:

"Today, friends, I am going to give you a little history as to who did and who did not work for the welfare of the masses. In my whole political career I have never failed to give credit where it was due, but on the other hand I am opposed to a man sailing under false colors, posing as the champion of the common people when his vote disproves his title. I say in all fairness that the so-called progressives did not win for the masses a single victory in the enactment of the law, the Payne-Aldrich measure being written in the United States statute book just as Messrs. Aldrich, Payne and Smoot desired written, with the exception of crude petroleum, and that victory was achieved by the Democrats."

Mr. Weiss referred to the congressional record to show that efforts to reduce tariff rates in numerous instances were opposed by the votes of La Follette, Dooliver, Cummins, Clapp, Brant and Borah. He also asserted that the votes of several of those men favored the removal of the tariff on certain luxuries and that in several instances they refused to vote when their voting might have brought about a reduction of rates.

He asserted that there was not a protest or debate against the tariff bill between March 15 and April 9, the date of its passage in the house, by either Congressman Cary, Davidson, Esch, Lenroot or Nelson.

Anti-Drinking Cup Ruling Causes No Hardships if Travelers Use Ingenuity.

In response to many complaints that the state board of health's ruling abolishing the common drinking cup on railroad trains is causing inconvenience and discomfort, amounting sometimes to hardship and suffering, the Wisconsin Anti-Tuberculosis association has issued a bulletin giving pointers for passengers showing how no one need go thirsty.

The railroads apparently are making no effort to follow the spirit of the ruling. Here is an excellent opportunity for live commercial enterprises to dispense individual paper cups, bearing their own advertisements, free to all.

"It is natural that the public does not at first appreciate the limitations imposed by a reform such as abolishing the polluted drinking cup," the bulletin says. "It is absolutely unnecessary that there should be inconvenience and hardship. It is not necessary to buy a metal cup from the 'news butcher' at an exorbitant price. Use a little ingenuity!"

"The cowboy, woodsman or country urchin needs no chain-fastened, rusty and polluted cup to dip water out of a spring. How much simpler it is to get water from a convenient tap, although the cup is absent!"

"A collapsible metal cup may be carried, as it is by many. Folded, tough paper cups are already part of the traveling outfits of many people. An old envelope affords a splendid substitute, or in case of extremity, a piece of paper can be rolled up into a cornucopia which will serve as a tolerable cup. It holds water plenty long enough to get a drink. Try it now with a piece of common paper."

"Don't go thirsty because the dirty common drinking cup has been taken away!"

A PITIFUL PASS.

It is reported upon Republican authority that President Taft while in Cincinnati succeeded in arranging a truce between the rival Republican factions in Ohio. But at what a cost may be gathered from the fact that Boss Cox is the main beneficiary of the deal. Senator Burton, at the entreaty of the President and for the good of the party, assumes the part of the lamb and lies down with Cox who takes the role of the lion—we can make a pretty shrewd guess as to what will happen to the lamb before the play ends! For several weeks Cox has been wrangling with Burton over the latter's failure to live up to the convention agreement, which he is said to have made with Cox. "Coxey, old boy," is therefore not only the boss of Cincinnati, but he is the important personage whom the President and other Republican leaders of Ohio must placate. To such a pitiful pass has the G. O. P. arrived in the state of Ohio.

Democratic Duties.

There are two duties for Democrats to perform that will not bear postponement until the usual "more convenient season." In the cities and the country precincts where the law requires the registration days must be remembered and the voter enroll himself or he will lose his vote. Also remind your more remiss Democratic neighbor to attend to the same important duty, don't rely upon his memory or promise, but urge him to accompany you to the registration office on the Tuesday before election.

Another equally important duty is to see that all Democrats vote. At the last state election a trifle over two per cent more Democrats voting would have carried Massachusetts for governor. A little less than two per cent more Democrats voting would have elected a Democratic governor of Missouri. Just over one per cent more Democrats voting would have elected the Democratic governor of New Jersey: the relative per centage of votes cast being Republican 50.55 and Democratic 49.50. Less than four per cent more Democrats voting would have elected the governor of New Hampshire. Less than half of one per cent more Democrats voting would have elected the delegate to Congress from New Mexico. Less than three per cent more Democrats voting would have defeated the Republican governor of Kentucky and a Republican United States senator. Taft carried Indiana by only one and one-half per cent more votes than Bryan received. The Democrats carried Colorado for President by only 1.11 per cent more votes than the Republican candidate received.

These figures show the importance of Democrats registering and voting. Two more Democrats voting in addition to each 100 votes cast will change the result in some states, and will certainly elect many candidates for Congress and the Legislature who otherwise will be defeated.

There are enough Democrats in all the close states and congressional districts to elect the Democratic candidates if they will only register and vote. The lazy and the laggard voters must be urged to do their duty to themselves and to their country by their ardent Democratic neighbors who bear the heat and the toil of the day.

HAS TRUE RING.

The platform adopted by the Democrats has the true ring. It is in accord with Democratic teachings. That adopted by LaFollette and his followers still clings to the idea of protection. The Milwaukee Journal, which has been a great admirer of the insurgents and stood for McJannet and LaFollette in the last campaign, does not like the plank. In the Milwaukee Journal of Saturday, October 1, the following appeared:

"The two party platforms in Wisconsin almost unconsciously, instinctively, emphasize the distinction between the fundamental principles upon which each believes government should be conducted. In many, perhaps most, details they advocate the same steps. Both would cut down the tariff, both would curtail the privileges now enjoyed by certain individuals or classes, both would bring the individual voter more directly in contact with governmental acts, both oppose prohibition in the form of county option. Notwithstanding these agreements in detail, the Republican platform still proclaims the policy of Special Privilege to such persons and classes as the government may choose to favor, while the Democratic document reannounces opposition to such favoritism and stands for equal rights to all.

Republicans would withdraw tariff benefits from some who now revel in them, but would still frame tariff laws so as to permit its present favorites to levy tribute on the people at large. They are horrified that business men as capitalists should combine, but would select new classes of favorites such as laborers and who may have the privilege to commit such crimes. In this principle of government are based the great bulk of our political and social evils. Once conceded a policy of allowing some to rob others, it is not possible within the limits of human capacity to confine the privilege to good robbers, not the robbery to equitable limits. It would seem that the half-century's experience with a protective tariff must convince any thoughtful person of this fact.

"If government is to continue, the policy of distributing loot, cupidity and strength rather than merit will mark the prize winners, and corruption of the distributors in all branches of government will continue. No substantial reform can be expected from occasional revolts against details. Until we return to the fundamental principle, 'Equal rights to all, Special Privileges to none,' such evils will continue and increase."

The Republican party has never been right on the tariff.

When You "See Stars."

The man who when struck violently on the head says he "saw stars" is not far from telling the truth. The fact is that there is a phosphorescent power in the eye which does not attract a person's attention under ordinary conditions, but which is distributed and reveals itself whenever the head gets a sudden shock and sometimes even in the act of sneezing. A blow on the head results in a pressure of the blood vessels upon the retina, causing either total darkness or a faint blue light which floats before the eyes, and it is in this faint blue light the imagination discerns the thousands of fantastic forms and figures that by general acceptance are termed stars; hence, while the astronomical display so frequently mentioned may be said to be entirely a creature of the imagination, there is at least some foundation for the idea. The true nature of the sensation is never very apparent, even to the victim, for the simple reason that it is invariably experienced under circumstances which render a searching introspective investigation out of the question.

A Witty Retort.

A good story is told of two great Irishmen, the late Archbishop Plunket and Father Healy, the well known parish priest of Bray. Making their way together to Bray railroad station one morning, the priest urged that they should hurry, but the prelate's appeal to his watch convinced him that they had ample time. They arrived to see the train for Dublin disappearing. The archbishop's apologies were lavish. He pleaded that he had always had unshaken faith in his watch. "My dear Lord Plunket," was Father Healy's rejoinder, "faith won't do without the good works."—Blackwood's Magazine.

Alkazazza.

Alkazazza is the name given to vessels of very porous earthenware which when filled with water are always moist outside and owing to the evaporation of the water on their surface always keep their contents cool. Alkazazza can be made from any good potter's clay by mixing with it 10 per cent of its weight, dry, of very fine sawdust and then working it. On burning the sawdust is destroyed and the clay thereby left porous.

Started in Business.

"Father thinks I ought to go in for business a bit," remarked the gilded youth.

"Made a start yet?"

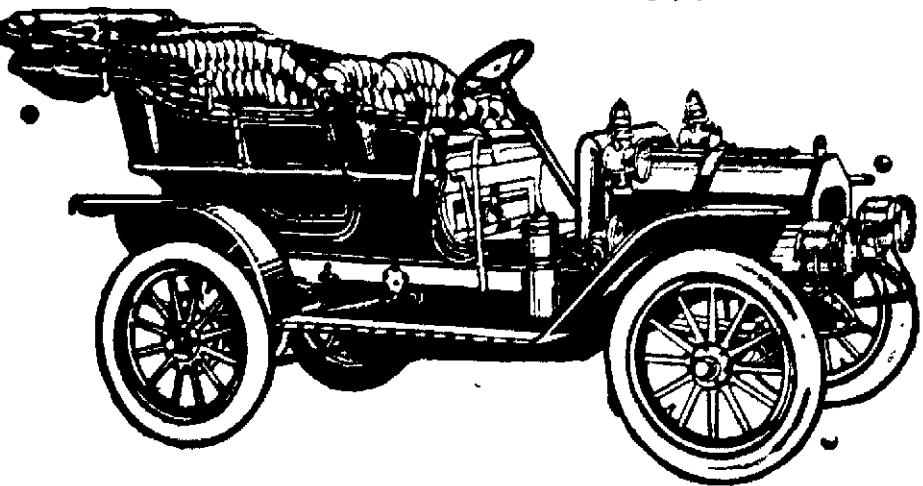

"Oh, yass, I've ordered three business suits and had me name put up at a commercial club."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

REO BREAKS THE RECORD

New York to San Francisco---What This Means to You.

The previous record was fifteen days and two hours, and it was a good one. It has stood three years in spite of many efforts made to break it, for the speed required over all sorts of roads—and much of the way nothing but "desert track"—make the trip the severest accelerated test of endurance.

But at last the REO tried it and smashed the record all to pieces—beat it by 4 days and 11 hours—and beat it fairly and squarely.

The trip was announced in the papers ahead of time so that any one who wanted to could see the start Monday morning, August 8, at one minute past twelve. At every point of the trip the arrival of the REO was checked in by men well known in the community who were not interested in the REO, and these checkings were supported by affidavits. The test was made open and above board—nothing to hide. If the REO had failed it would have gone back and tried over again—over and over again if necessary and all so open that everybody could verify facts.

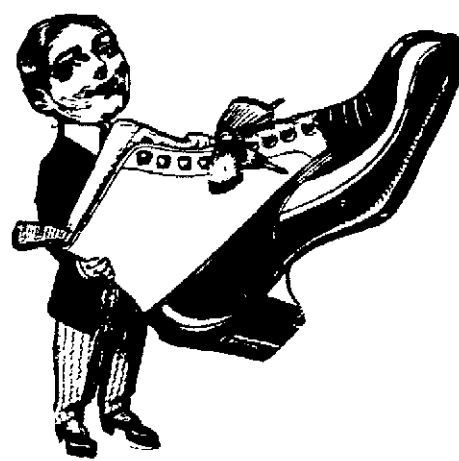

But it wasn't necessary. The REO has the stuff that stands every test. It has the high power and strength, and it has the construction that permits full use of power over all sorts of roads—even deserts with no roads.

The car that made the previous record was $1,000. The REO that beat it is only $1,250.

The same kind of car that made the run can be seen at Arnott.

There are so many kinds of insurgents now days that it is hard to determine which is of the "all wool and a yard wide quality." In Wisconsin the insurgent differs from the Roosevelt insurgent. Roosevelt insurges in the west and standpat in the east. Let no question as to the quality of insurgents arise. Four tramps were given a free ride in the patrol wagon last Sunday morning, being taken as far as the Plover river and gently but firmly requested to depart towards the rising sun. Two of them were arrested for begging at the South Side, Saturday afternoon, and the others were placed in the cooler after that evening. The entire quartette belong to the professional class.
Mrs. Fred Schroeder, who lives near Curtis, up in Clark county, while returning to her home from the creamery, driving a one horse light wagon, was struck by east bound passenger train No. 8 on the Soo, last Wednesday morning. Both the woman and the horse were killed and the rig demolished. Mrs. Schroeder was about 70 years of age, the mother of five children.
A spark from a locomotive on a Soo freight train set fire to a car loaded with wood, near Hamilton, Monday afternoon, and soon three cars were ablaze. These were hastily detached and run back to Fond du Lac, where it was found necessary to unload one of the cars in order to extinguish the blaze and the others were saved with good water from the fire department. This is the third time that Soo line freight trains have caught fire, while enroute between the two points mentioned.

BENEFIT OF ATHLETICS

High School Boys Reap a Good Harvest at Fifth Annual Entertainment, Given Friday Evening.

The annual High school fair and supper for the benefit of the Athletic Association was given at the school, last Friday evening, and proved a very successful undertaking, although not as many of our towns people attended as should have been present.
The supper was served in the large dining room in the domestic science department, which adjoins the kitchen. It will be remembered that the domestic science department was placed on the third floor when the improvements were made in the High school building this summer, and no more convenient quarters for serving a supper of this kind can be found in the city. The tables were prettily decorated with autumn leaves, salvia and red candles in glass candleabra and the best and most efficient service was given by young ladies selected from the different classes in the High school and supervised by some of the teachers. The decorations were in charge of the art teacher, Miss Hazel Rice, assisted by some of the young lady pupils and their zealous work was shown in the pretty effect produced. Many compliments were given the palatableness of the supper, which was prepared under the direction of Miss Myra Congdon, domestic science teacher.
After supper patrons were also given an opportunity to witness a farce in the assembly room and a vaudeville performance in one of the recitation rooms. The farce was entitled "Retaliation" and was produced under the direction of Miss Bessie Donning. The cast was made up of Misses Agnes Forsyth and Emma Winne and Rudolph Helm, Myron Emmons and Emil Grebin, all of whom acquitted themselves very creditably. The platform had been extended and fitted up like a "real" stage, even in so far as having foot lights, which were installed by Mr. Hammond, the manual training teacher.
The vaudeville performance was given by members of the football team, coached by Mr. Busa, and consisted of wrestling and heavy lifting stunts by the famous Zobisco brothers, Geo. Dumas and Bernard Dobeck, a monologue by Gladstone O'Keefe and a song "I want to be a great big football man," the verses of which were sung by Lawrence Park and Jedd Chenevert and the choruses by the entire team in football costume.
The chrysanthemum, candy and popcorn booths were all very attractive and especially pretty was the "Rebecca at the Well" booth, where lemonade was served by several young ladies in charge of Miss Kiefer, the music teacher. Miss Kiefer also directed the High school orchestra, which played several numbers before each performance of the farce.
Last Friday's entertainment was the fifth annual affair of this kind, and owing to the untiring efforts of both teachers and students, interest in this event does not wane, but seems to grow with each succeeding year. About $180 was taken in through the various sources of revenue and this will be used to the best possible advantage to promote athletics in a general way and give all students an opportunity to be benefited thereby.

Some Good Shooting.
At a clay pigeon shooting contest, last Sunday afternoon at McDill, the following scores were made out of a possible 100: A. M. Christman, 88; J. McCorkindale, 87; Dr. Smiley, 86; Paul Woznicki, 75; John Luszczewicz, 75; W. B. Coddington, 73; Emil Peuckert, 18; W. Caskey, 18; C. Melentine, 17; Frank Buski, 17; D. Higgins, 15; E. Gyrion, 15, and Geo. Johnson 14 out of a possible 25. Bunn broke 7 out of 10.

Change in the Force.
Thos. J. Coan is now serving as a patrolman, being on duty at the South Side, succeeding Leo Boyer, who was suspended by the chief of police, who charged him with sleeping while on duty on the night of Sept. 30th, as well as on other previous dates, and also with other conduct unbecoming a public officer. The charges were filed with the board of police and the commissioners to whom Officer Boyer acknowledged his guilt and asked to be reinstated, promising to do better in the future. The board, however, refused to grant his request and voted in favor of his discharge, after which Mr. Coan was appointed to fill the vacancy. Mr. Boyer was the oldest officer in the force, having been first appointed a policeman about fifteen years ago, and had served almost a century ever since.

Returned For Treatment.
As announced last week, the head of the dog that bit Mrs. Hansen and was supposed to have been afflicted with rabies, was sent to the state board of health at Madison, where it was examined, and on Friday last Dr. von Neupert, Sr., the local health officer, received a statement to the effect that the dog had been afflicted with the disease above stated. Immediately after the attack on Mrs. Hansen she left for the Pasteur Institute at Madison, accompanied by her husband, but remained there only a day, as it was then uncertain as to the condition of the dog, and to secure a thorough treatment it would be necessary to stay for 21 days. After the report was received from the state board, however, Mrs. Hansen returned to Madison, leaving on Saturday morning accompanied by Miss Lulu Ceary.

Hackett, held a meeting a few days ago, at which time much business of interest to stockholders was transacted and officers elected as follows:

The Ladies' Missionary Society of the Baptist church met on Thursday last, at which time officers were elected as follows: President, Mrs. F. H. Patterson; vice president, Mrs. G. E. Vaughn; secretary, Mrs. Roy J. Hagan; treasurer, Mrs. Lulu Sparks.

P. J. Bresnahan has just finished an addition to his business place at the South Side, 16x21 feet in size, one story. He expects to erect a new block in the near future just north of his present site, 26x80 feet, and the prospects are that it will be of solid brick construction.

Rev. W. H. Fuller spent a part of last week at Oshkosh, where the annual meeting of the Wisconsin Baptist state convention was held, and was largely attended, a number of noted church workers among the clergy and laity from outside the state also being present. Mr. Fuller was one of the speakers.

Mrs. W. G. Preston, who has been here since the burial of her husband, left for her home at Neenah yesterday. Mrs. Preston will at once dispose of the steam laundry owned and operated by Mr. Preston for a number of years, and with her three children will spend the winter with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Eggleston at Bellingham, Wash.

Mid the blowing of whistles, ringing of bells and tooting of horns, the last spike on the Soo cut-off between Owen and Spencer was driven at the latter town at about 10 o'clock last Thursday morning. Considerable ballasting will have to be done on the new line and it may be another month before regular train service is established.

The eight year old daughter of Fred M. Sackett, one of our local letter carriers, is laid up at the family home with an attack of typhoid fever. Last Saturday her condition was very serious, but she has shown signs of improvement since then. The parents are being assisted in the little girl's care by Mr. Sackett's sister, Miss Ida of Chicago, who has had several years' experience as a nurse.

A. V. Birch, a well known and popular Soo engineer and a former resident of Stevens Point, has succeeded F. T. Bowles as traveling engineer on the road. Mr. Birch has been employed as roundhouse foreman at North Fond du Lac for the past seven years and has been in the employ of the company for thirty-two years. Lynn Colburn succeeds him as foreman in the North Fond du Lac roundhouse.

Andrew Anderson, who is about to engage in the drug business at the corner of Church and Monroe streets, in the building formerly occupied by W. F. Voigt, expects to be ready to wait upon customers by next Monday or Tuesday. The walls have been decorated with very handsome paper and fixtures will be finished in white enamel. Mr. Anderson will have one of the neatest places in town.

Some Good Shooting.

At a clay pigeon shooting contest, last Sunday afternoon at McDill, the following scores were made out of a possible 100: A. M. Christman, 88; J. McCorkindale, 87; Dr. Smiley, 86; Paul Woznicki, 76; John Lukaszewicz, 75; W. B. Coddington, 73; Emil Pauckert, 18; W. Coskey, 18; C. Melentine, 17; Frank Buski, 17; D. Higgins, 15; E. Change in the Force.

Thos. J. Coan is now serving as a patrolman, being on duty at the South Side, succeeding Leo Boyer, who was suspended by the chief of police, who charged him with sleeping while on duty on the night of Sept. 22nd, as well as on other previous dates, and also with other conduct unbecoming a public officer. The charges were filed with the board of police and fire commissioners, to whom Officer Boyer acknowledged his guilt and asked to be reinstated, promising to do better in the future. The board, however, refused to grant his request and voted in favor of his discharge, after which Mr. Coan was appointed to fill the vacancy. Mr. Boyer was the oldest officer on the force, having been first appointed a policeman about fifteen years ago, and had served almost continuously ever since.

Returned For Treatment.

As announced last week, the head of the dog that bit Mrs. Gilbert Hansen and was supposed to have been afflicted with rabies, was sent to the state board of health at Madison, where it was examined, and on Friday last Dr. von Neupert, Sr., the local health officer, received a statement to the effect that the dog had been afflicted with the disease above stated. Immediately after the attack on Mrs. Hansen she left for the Pasteur Institute at Madison, accompanied by her husband, but remained there only a day, as it was then uncertain as to the condition of the dog, and to secure a thorough treatment it would be necessary to stay for 21 days. After the report was received from the state board, however, Mrs. Hansen returned to Madison, leaving on Saturday morning accompanied by Miss Lulu Ceary.

New Bank Officers.

The newly elected directors of the Wisconsin State bank, composed of M. A. Haddock, E. J. Pfaffner, Geo. B. Nelson, D. E. Frost, T. H. Hanna, Louis Brill, L. A. Pomeroy and R. H. Hackett, held a meeting a few days ago, at which time much business of interest to stockholders was transacted and officers elected as follows:

Pres.—R. H. Hackett.
Vice Pres.—L. A. Pomeroy.
Acting Cashier—G. H. Warner.
Mr. Hackett is a resident of Oshkosh and Mr. Pomeroy of Amherst, but both of them will devote considerable time looking after the interests of the Wisconsin State bank.

Railway Franchise Granted.

The city council of Madison has granted a franchise to the Chicago & Wisconsin Valley railway company, giving them the right to use certain streets in the city over which to travel, together with an inlet and outlet from all directions and the right to circle capitol square. The only opposition among the aldermen to the ordinance was to the method of coming into the city, some wanting the company to use the tracks of the present street railway and others being opposed to using Washington avenue. The ordinance, however, was granted and approved by the mayor. It is expected that active work will be resumed at once, and that the Stevens Point council will soon be called upon to act in the matter of a franchise.

Dishonest Tree Agents.

Dishonest tree agents are plentiful in this state according to reports from Secretary Crane of the State Horticultural Society. Agents claiming to represent Illinois and Ohio firms are selling varieties of cherry entirely unsuited to Wisconsin climate at exorbitant prices. One farmer is reported as buying 1,000 trees at $1.10 each and others large numbers at 65 to 65 cents each and buyer agrees in addition to give half the first crop. Reliable nursery men in Wisconsin and elsewhere sell better kinds at 30 cents each. Barnum stated a great truth when he said people like to be humbugged. Both the Horticultural Society and the Agricultural College constantly offer free advice on such subjects.

ANSWER IT HONESTLY

Are the Statements of Stevens Point Citizens Not More Reliable Than Those of Utter Strangers?

This is a vital question. It is fraught with interest to Stevens Point. It permits of only one answer. It cannot be evaded or ignored. A Stevens Point citizen speaks here. Speaks for the welfare of Stevens Point. A citizen's statement is reliable. An utter stranger's doubtful. Home proof is the best proof.

PROBLEMS OF ROAD BUILDING.

Location of a Highway Must Be Planned Most Carefully.

THE IMPORTANCE OF DRAINAGE

How to Keep Water, the Greatest Enemy of Roads, Off and Away From Them—Careful Attention Must Be Paid to Character of Subsoil in Preparing Road Beds.

Important road construction problems were discussed as follows by Dr. Joseph Hyde Pratt, state geologist of North Carolina and president of the Appalachian Good Roads association, in an address delivered by him before the Appalachian Engineering association at Winston-Salem, N. C., on May 6 last:

The location of a road is really the only permanent part of a road, and therefore in determining upon the location it must be very carefully worked out, so that when once the road is constructed there will never be any question regarding any change in its location. In constructing a road between two points the shortest distance is, of course, desirable, but it will often be found that "the longest way around is the shortest way home" and that the shortest distance between two places is not the practical route for a public road on account of the excessive cost of constructing the same. We have often seen roads that were located apparently so as to make the shortest distances, and the result has been that the road followed up one hill and down another regardless of how steep the rise or sharp the descent. Roads located as this one are passable, but a team can haul only from one-third to one-tenth of what it could on a well graded road. We have often seen roads that were muddy a good part of the year, and we have passed over them at different times of the day without ever having seen the rays of the sun strike the surface of the road. If we had given thought to the reason we would probably have found that the road was located on the north side of a hill or in rather heavy woods. This is a mistake that has often been made and is still being made, but every road engineer should as far as possible avoid locating a dirt road on the north slopes of a hill or mountain unless it is absolutely necessary, and in that case the woods should be trimmed up so that the sun's rays will be given every possible facility to reach the road's surface and keep it dry. This does not apply as much to roads that are to be surfaced with stone.

In connection with the location of a road the character of the soil of which the road-bed will be made should be carefully investigated, for it will be found that certain soils are very difficult to build or to drain and make the maintenance of the road after it is completed and surfaced with some suitable material very hard and expensive. It will very often be found that certain soils are composed of materials that are naturally adapted to the construction of a roadbed, and building the road across them very materially lessens the cost of its construction.

In making a survey for a road between two points there may be two or more routes that will seem available, and one or more of these will have certain features that are more favorable than the others. Each route should be carefully considered as to what grading would be necessary to bring it to the grade required, what will be the expense of the culverts and ditches necessary to take care of the water and what will be the cost of maintenance. Another question in regard to the location which must be given a certain amount of consideration is the number of people that will be benefited by the road. All these questions must be carefully considered before anything definite is decided regarding the location, and whatever location is decided upon it ought to be a permanent one.

A first class improved road must be so graded as to permit of the hauling of a maximum load at all times and also prevent washing by rainwater. The locating and grading of a road are so closely allied that it is hard to separate them from each other, for the location must be such that the grade can be maintained. No grade should be permitted of over 4-1/2 per cent, for this is the maximum grade over which a team can haul for a certain distance the same load that it can haul over a level road. It is also the maximum grade that a road can have and yet not require "thank-you-mans" on the surface of the road to turn the water on the surface into side ditches to prevent washing of the middle of the road. In some localities the cost of constructing a road so that it will have no grade over 4-1/2 per cent is very great, but I believe that it will pay to construct any road with all its grades below this 4-1/2 per cent, for the saving in time by being able to haul the greater load over the road of the lesser grade and the saving of stock will more than pay for the extra cost of constructing the road in a very few years.

One of the most important problems to be considered in connection with road construction is the question of drainage. Water is the greatest enemy of the road, and the engineer must make arrangements to keep the water off and away from the road. It is not only necessary to keep the water off the surface of the road, but it is also very essential to keep the water out of the side ditches, so that there will be no chance whatever of seepage under the road. The engineer must study the topography of the country through which the road is passing and determine the amount of rainfall and thus the amount of water that he will have to take care of by means of his side ditches, culverts and bridges. I might say here that after the engineer has made his estimate regarding the amount of water that he must take care of at any certain point along his road it would be a very safe plan for him to double this estimate in making his calculation for the size of the culverts or bridges, for the reason that occasionally cloudbursts may take place, and more land may be cleared or burnt over, which will give him an excessive amount of water, a great deal more than he would have calculated from the topography of the country and the amount of rainfall. His road must be able to withstand such a flow of water, for if not it means a very heavy cost to the country or state for repairs. Wherever it is necessary to carry water from one side of the road to the other it should always be carried under the surface of the road, either through concrete, metallic or other special forms of culverts, which will prevent any of the water from coming in contact with the roadbed. As often as possible the water should be taken out of the side ditches and discharged into the adjoining fields in order to prevent the wearing action of an increased volume of water on the bottom of the ditches. The grade of the ditches should also be kept at a minimum in order to prevent the cutting action of swift running water. On the other hand, they should be given a sufficient grade so that the water can rapidly be carried out of the ditches, for otherwise there will be a tendency for water to seep under the road. We may consider the wearing surface of the road as its roof, which must be kept as impervious to water as possible and be so constructed that the rainfall and melting snows will flow freely and quickly into the gutters on each side. On the other hand, however, the water must not flow so fast as to give it a cutting action and thus fill the surface of the road with slight depressions. Too much slope from the center of the road to the side ditches is bad not only on account of the cutting action of the water, but it will also cause wagons to all travel in the same track, and there will also be a tendency for all vehicles to slide or skid. The road surface should have a gradual fall of about 1 to 20.

In preparing the roadbed careful attention should be paid to the character of the subsoil, as in many instances a soil will be encountered upon which it will be almost impossible to construct a satisfactory road without very careful surface and subsurface draining. After the surface has been brought to the right slope it should be thoroughly rolled, and any depressions that may be observed should be filled in with material of the same consistency and character as the balance of the roadbed. Any soft places that cannot be satisfactorily hardened by tamping should be cut out and filled in with the good material. This applies not only to the surface of a dirt road, whether it is to remain as such or is to be finally surfaced with macadam, sand clay or gravel, but it also applies to any weak places that may develop in the surface of any other materials.

No matter how carefully the roadbed may have been constructed, weak places are sometimes overlooked, and after the road has been in use for a short time these begin to develop. If they are repaired at once little or no damage will result to the road as a whole, and the repairing can be done at slight expense. On the other hand, if they are allowed to go for some time the cost of repairing them will be only increased, but they will permit water to seep down through them and begin to undermine the road.

The above four problems in regard to road construction apply to all classes of roads regardless of how they are to be surfaced, and the roadbed should be constructed just as carefully for a macadam, sand clay or gravel as a dirt road.

What We Spend on Roads.

The United States spends $200,000,000 annually on 2,500,000 miles of roads; England spends $80,000,000 on her 150,000 miles each year, or fourteen times as much as this magnificent country commonly referred to as the grandest country on the face of the globe. It is also the muddiest.

It's The World's Best.
No one has ever made a salve, ointment or balm to compare with Bucklen's Arnica Salve. It's the one perfect healer of cuts, corns, burns, bruises, sores, scalds, boils, ulcers, eczema, salt rheum. For sore eyes, cold sores, chapped hands, or spains, it's the supreme. Infallible for piles. Only 25c at H. D. McCulloch Co.

Quite a number of Republican "lame ducks"—standpatters—gathered in Washington when the President was there. What a flock of them there will be after election, and what a job it will be for President Taft to mend their broken political bones!

Hoarseness in a child subject to croup is a sure indication of the approach of the disease. If Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is given at once or even after the croupy cough has appeared, it will prevent the attack. Contains no poison. Sold by H. D. McCulloch Co.

Jim Tawney, the standpatter Minnesota congressman, has met his fate at the hands of an unknown young lawyer with insurgent proclivities, who, in turn, will be beaten by a Democrat—Buck, of Winona.

"To Be or Not To Be"
"Constantly coughing depends on whether or not you use Dr. Bell's Pine Tar-Honey. A few doses will stop that cough."

Representative Payne declares that he has "no apologies to make" for the tariff bill; but a good many other Republicans by force of public opinion think it requires amending.

Her Brother
By ROBERT L. JAYNES
Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

When I was keepin' store in Arizona a young woman came in on the stage one evenin' and put up at the tavern. The next mornin' she come into my store and tole me she'd come out from the east to find employment. She couldn't stenograph or typewrite. If she could she needn't have come away from home, but she could keep a cash account, sell goods and do any ordinary work about the store. She was a mighty trim little body, and I tole her she'd better git married and let the other feller do the work; but she larked and said it tuk two to make a match. I tuk her in for help, thinkin' if she turned out as well as she looked I wouldn't mind makin' the other one of the two.

But it soon appeared that she wasn't goin' to turn out as well as she looked. First thing I knowed a feller came into the store to see her that looked like a road agent. They seemed to be mighty familiar and did a lot o' talkin' in the back o' the store while I was engaged waitin' on a customer in the front. When the feller went out I said to the young woman, says I: "Rosy"—that was her name—"if you're cahoots with a gang o' robbers the sooner you git out the better."

"Oh, that feller was all right!" she said.

"Who is he?"

"Why, he's my brother."

"Your brother?" I says, turnin' away from her contemptuously. "If that's the kind of family y' belong to I don't think much of yer stock."

There was nothin' more said about it at the time, but I done up a lot o' thinkin'. Fust off I thort I'd better give the young woman the grand bounce, but I didn't know whether she was up to anything or not, and if she wasn't I didn't want to lose her. She wasn't so much use about the store—I didn't have so very much for her to do—but I'd got a hankerin' after her.

Well, the next thing that happened looked kind o' suspicious. I was layin' one night on a settle in the back o' the store when I heered somethin' rattlin' at the front door. I jist reached back under a pillar, tuk my weepion and let drive through the panel I heered a yell an', goin' to the door, listened. Not hearin' anything more, I opened the door and by the light of a match I struck saw drops o' blood leadin' away. I calculated I'd hit some un' who was goin' to rob the store.

Wal, this thing comin' so soon after the visit of Rosy's brother, I didn't know what to think about it. I noticed when I tole her about it she looked kinder queer.

"Hope he warn't yer brother," I said to her, an' I thort she was goin' to faint. Seem' it bothered her to talk about it I didn't say nothin' more, and after awhile she righted, though for a few days she didn't look very cheerful. But one day the feller that she said was her brother come in. He looked kind o' white in the face. He talked with Rosy awhile an' went out.

"Reckon yer brother's been sick," I says, a-sympathizin' with her.

"Yes," she says, "he has."

"What's he do for a livin'?"

"He ain't doin' nothin' jist now. I'm tryin' to git a place fer him. Trade's mighty brisk lately. Don't yer think y' need a shippin' clerk?"

"I don't think I do."

I wondered if she thort I was soft enough to believe the feller was her brother and out of employment. I reckoned he wasn't employed, except when he was holdin' up a coach or somepin' like that. And I reckoned she'd have to do a lot o' coaxin' to git me to take in a man to work who'd tried to rob me and I'd winged when he was startin' in to do it.

But we men are kind o' queer's well as the wimmen. One day the feller come into the store in a hurry. Rosy was there and turned pale. He said somepin' to her quick, and she panted under the counter. He ducked jist in time to dodge the sheriff, who come runnin' in with a weepion in one hand and a pair o' bracelets in t'other. Rosy she stood up agin the counter right where the feller wor hid.

"Enny one come in here?" asked the sheriff.

Now, I'm a-goin' to explain why we men is queer as well as the wimmen. Rosy she give me jist one look. She might as well have sent a few ounces o' lead at me, so far as my doin' enny interference was concerned.

"Hain't seen no one," I says, talkin' parrot-like, jest as Rosy wanted me to.

"Singular: I thort I had him cornered!"

He was out in a jiffy, and when the danger was past Rosy put the feller in a back office I had my boots in and called me in too.

"You're a trump!" she says.

"And yer brother's the knave," I says, replyin'.

She could scarcely keep from larkin' at my joke. But she didn't. She tole me the feller wor really her brother, that he'd gone bad and she'd come out to reclaim him. She had got him to promise to go east with her, but she couldn't get him off unless I'd help her instead o' givin' 'em away. I tole her I'd do all I could on condition she'd come back and run her part o' the store and me, too, as she'd been a-doin' of it. She promised, and I got 'em away safe.

She's back now, runnin' both me and the store.

DAMES AND DAUGHTERS.
Miss Rose Cleveland is giving much time to genealogical research.
Boston is justly proud of the record made by a fifteen-year-old girl, Rose Pitonof, who swam from Charlestown bridge to Boston light, covering close to twelve miles in a little short of seven hours.

The sportswomen of France, led by Mme. Camille du Gast and Mlle. Marie Durand, have entered a protest against the campaign against permitting women to take part in sporting contests which is being carried on by Henri Rochefort, the editor.

Dorothea Smith, a schoolgirl living in Brooklyn, has received notice of a bequest of $12,000 left in trust for her by Henry Peyser of Brussels, Belgium. She is thirteen years old and will enter the girls' high school this fall. Peyser, a glove manufacturer in business with Dorothea's father, Charles E. Smith, died recently in Brussels.

Mrs. Champ Clark, wife of the Democratic leader of the house of representatives, returned recently from Edinburgh, where she was a delegate to the world's missionary conference and wrote for the Edinburgh Herald a report of the conference from an American woman's viewpoint. Mrs. Clark and her daughter then toured the continent.

Base Hits.
Four triple plays have been made in the National league this season.

Manager Connie Mack of the Athletics cuts in for a quarter of the profits of the Philadelphia club.

Jake Daubert of Brooklyn is about the niftiest first sacker in the National league and is as game as they make 'em.

Elberfeld of the Washington Americans considers himself the lightest player in the major leagues. He weighs only 135 pounds.

Ping Bodie, the heavy hitting right fielder of the San Francisco club of the Pacific Coast league, has eclipsed every record made in league baseball for home runs thus far this season. He has been putting the ball over the fence throughout the circuit with great regularity.

Tales of Cities.
In Honan city, distant only two days by rail from Peking, lump silver, the same cumbersome currency that has been used for centuries, is still employed.

Spokane has put a coating of oil on ten miles of streets and is congratulating itself on the prospect of freedom from dust and the increased attractiveness of the city as a place for homes.

No business whatever can now be done on Sundays in the Mexican city of Mazatlan. Heretofore all places of business have been open from 8 till 12 on Sundays, allowing only one-half holiday to employees in the whole week.

Cheerful Blunders.
Liverpool children are credited with the following cheerful blunders in examinations:

The horse is as tall as a middle aged man.

The pig has been the goose that lays the golden eggs to many people.

Many Americans would not be millionaires without the falsely blamed pig.

The pig is a native of China, and it can go into houses and sit down like a Christian.

The horse consists of fetlocks, joints, snuk, upper arm and hock. Without these the graceful animal could not live.

Music is the art of the prophets, the only art which can calm the agitations of the soul.—Luther.

Music in the works of its greatest masters is more marvelous, more mysterious, than poetry.—H. Giles.

Music is the only one of the fine arts in which not only man, but all other animals, have a common property.—Jean Paul Richter.

The Age of Forty.
Forty is the age at which a man is supposed to be in his prime.

Forty is old to a man of thirty and young to a man of fifty.

At forty some men quit sowing wild oats and others begin.

Forty is an imaginary line between youth and old age.

Some men are forty at twenty and some at sixty.

At forty a man is supposed to have reached years of discretion, and generally he has unless some woman wills it otherwise.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Waves of Water.
Slow rivers are those which flow at the rate of three to seven miles per hour.

The largest gulf in the world is the gulf of Mexico—800,000 square miles—almost twice as big as the bay of Bengal.

Investigation shows that the waves of the Atlantic are probably larger than those of any other body of water, reaching forty-two feet. Waves of this size look much higher from the deck of a vessel.

The seven year old son of Martin Windorf shot and killed his younger brother, a child of four years, last Thursday. Martin had taken his shotgun to the field for the purpose of bagging some of the numerous rabbits and other game which abounds. The two children accompanied him on Thursday but he was called back to the house on an errand and left the little ones for a few moments. As the boys failed to get sight of any rabbits the older one suggested that his brother "play rabbit" and he would be the mighty hunter. Dr. E. P. Crosby, recently of Lemira, Wis., has located at Arnott for the practice of his profession as a physician and surgeon, and is now ready to attend to all calls and duties appertaining thereto. The following is from the Lemira Review of last week:

Expressions of regret and surprise were heard from all sides last week when it became known that Dr. E. P. Crosby had disposed of his practice to Dr. T. F. Manning of Wauwatosa. Dr. Crosby has been with us during the past five years and during that time gained many staunch and warm supporters. He was a man of great ability and controlled the luxurious practices in this part of the state. His conduct and services were appreciated, which was demonstrated by the reception tendered him and the bride several years ago upon their return of their honeymoon. The young couple were then presented with a hundred dollar silver set. The doctor held a number of offices in this village, being health commissioner for several years and examining physician for the Modern Woodmen Camp. The doctor and his family have endeared themselves to the entire community and it is deeply regretted that they have moved away from here. Nevertheless their many friends unite with us in wishing them continuous success in their new home, which we understand will be near Stevens Point.

Profits of Monte Carlo, the World's Gaming Center

MONTE CARLO

THE Societe de Monaco is one of those interesting propositions, just so far hidden by circumstances from the public gaze that, though nine men out of ten in the other places would probably be aware of its existence, only one out of ten would in all probability have anything better than the haziest idea of its financial position and prospects, or could even give approximately the current quotation of its shares.

Yet its prosperity depends to the very largest extent upon its British customers, who go to "break the bank at Monte Carlo"—so much so that, on a good French authority, the Banque Henry Dupont of Paris, the outbreak of the war in the Transvaal brought down its dividend in 1899-1900 from 275 francs to 220 francs a share; its continuance the following year reduced it still further to 210 francs; its after consequences kept it down to 225 francs during 1901-02 and 1902-03, and it was only in 1903-04 that it definitely regained its lost "way," and the dividend amounted to 295 francs.

In the middle of the last century the principality of Monaco had an area of 135 square kilometers, when, to avert the consequences of an insurrectionary movement, the prince of Monaco sold all his territory to France, save one and one-half square kilometers, on which Monaco and Monte Carlo now stand, for 4,000,000 francs. The bulk of the revenue of the principality having disappeared with its taxpayers, the prince adopted the plan then in force in several German states of raising revenue by means of a gambling casino, and the Societe de Monaco was formed for this purpose in 1863.

Its success was but moderate, until it secured the services of M. Blanc, a past master in the art of conducting this particular form of business. By 1871 it had gained such a footing that the prince was able to abolish all taxation in the principality. The prohibition in Germany of roulette and trente-et-quarante on January 1, 1873, transferred the German gambling clientele to Monte Carlo and confirmed the success of the Moroccan company.

This success, though subject to certain fluctuations, on the whole has been very great ever since. The company was capitalized from the commencement at 30,000,000 francs, in 60,000 shares of 500 francs each, and in this share capital has never been increased since, but in 1899 power was obtained from the shareholders to split the shares into fifths—100 francs normal—which has been done to a certain extent, and the "fifths" are quoted as well as the full share in the Marche au banque of the Paris bourse. A debenture issue of 42,000,000 francs in 200 franc bonds bearing four per cent interest was authorized in 1898, the redemption to be effected by annual drawings terminating in 1948. In 1898 90,000 of these bonds were sold to the public at 240—a very considerable discount, and in 1905 53,000 more were marketed at 265. They are now quoted on the Paris bourse at 305, and there are still 26,700 unissued.

The company is based, of course, on a concession granted by the prince of Monaco to conduct the gaming casino on certain terms of a period of 50 years, from 1863 to 1913; but in 1898 this term was prolonged by the prince to 1948, on the company's pledging itself to pay in cash to the government of the principality 10,000,000 francs immediately and 15,000,000 francs in 1913; to execute certain public works valued at 5,000,000 francs, construct a new theater for 2,000,000 francs and pay 25,000 francs for every performance to go toward the chief actors' salaries.

A second prolongation till April 1, 1948, took place last November, the additional burdens assumed by the company being to pay the prince of Monaco three per cent of the gross annual receipts till 1948, and from 1948 to 1958 as much as eight per cent; to construct a road from Monaco to Nice, at a cost of 600,000 francs, to supply gas throughout the principality at 18 centimes the cubic meter, and to appropriate 100,000 francs annually to an employees' pension guarantee fund.

From this it will be seen that the new charges which will press upon the company for the next few years and will have to be allowed for in making any calculations as to likelihood of improvement in revenue, are chiefly: (1) A lump sum of 15,000,000 francs, to be paid to the government in 1913; (2) three per cent of gross takings to be paid each to the prince; and (3) 150,000 francs a year for the next four years to be spent on road-making—a mere fleabite that will scarcely have any effect at all.

The burdens imposed on the company in 1899 and since seem at first sight considerable; but a review of its history shows that they have hitherto been borne with ease. For the year 1871-2 the accounts are made up to March 31 of each year and its dividend coupons detached in May and November—it paid a dividend of no more than 25.50 francs or 6½ per cent on its nominal capital; the company had just made a fair start after the Franco-Prussian war; but by 1881-2 the dividend had been increased to 64 francs or 12½ per cent, and ten years later still for 1891-2, it stood at 235 francs, or 47 per cent on the original share.

Let us now see how it bore the heavy burdens imposed upon it in 1898, which we can only do reliably by observing the advance or setback of the dividend.

Turning now to the dividend record for 1898-9—the year when the company pledged itself to pay 10,000,000 francs down and spend 1,700,000 francs on public works, including a theater—the dividend stood at 275 francs, or 55 per cent on the original capital.

It was further handicapped, as noticed above, by the South African war, and the dividend next year dropped to 220 francs or 44 per cent, and the year after that to 210 francs, or 42 per cent, a low-water mark it has since never touched. During the next two years it stood at 225 francs, or 45 per cent, and then began to rise rapidly, the figures being as follows: 1903-4, 295 francs, or 59 per cent; 1904-5, 320 francs, or 64 per cent; 1905-6, 350 francs, or 70 per cent; high-water mark; 1906-7, 290 francs, 58 per cent; 1906-8, 300 francs, 60 per cent; 1909-10, 315 francs, 60 per cent.

There is little doubt that the company could, had it chosen, have distributed much larger dividends than those noted of late years. "But," says the Banque Henry Dupont in a recent circular referring to this matter, "the directors have made a point of entirely amortizing all the expenditures on improvements and gradually accumulating the sum of 15,000,000 francs to be paid to the prince in 1913."

On the other hand the prolongation of the concession made last November more than compensates for the new burdens to be assumed since then. The ten years added to the concession reduces the annual sinking fund appropriation by almost 160,000,000 francs, while the new annual charges only mean about 1,480,000 francs.

That this last calculation is pretty accurate appears from the fact that three per cent on 38,492,000 francs, the gross profits for 1909-10, works out at 1,154,760 francs; the road to Nice takes 150,000 francs annually for four years; the annual loss on gas is a trifle of 75,000 francs and the pension fund takes 100,000 francs, in all 1,479,760 francs.

Deducting this from the amount by which the sinking fund appropriation is reduced—namely 1,600,000 francs—a positive annual gain to the company of about 120,000 francs is apparent.

SYNOPSIS.

personal estate, to be sold at auction, the Chatworth ring, known as the Crow Idol, mysteriously disappears. Harry Cressy, who was present, describes the ring to his fiancée, Flora Gilsey, and her chamberlain, Mrs. Clara Britton, as being like a heathen god, with a beautiful sapphire set in the head. Flora meets Mr. Kerr, an Englishman, at the club. In discussing the disappearance of the ring, the exploits of an English thief, Farrell Wand, are recalled. Flora has a fancy that Harry and Kerr know something about the mystery. Kerr tells Flora that he has met Harry somewhere, but cannot place him. $20,000 reward is offered for the return of the ring. Harry admits to Flora that he dislikes Kerr. Harry takes Flora to a Chinese goldsmith's to buy an engagement ring. An exquisite sapphire set in a hoop of brass is selected. Harry urges her not to wear it until it is reset. The possession of the ring seems to cast a spell over Flora. She becomes uneasy and apprehensive. Flora meets Kerr at a box party. She is startled by the effect on him when he gets a glimpse of the sapphire. The possibility that the stone is part of the Crow Idol causes Flora much anxiety. Unseen, Flora discovers Clara ransacking her dressing room. Flora refuses to give or sell the stone to Kerr, and suspects him of being the thief.

CHAPTER XIII.

Thrust and Parry.

My dear Flora: I am going out early and shall not be back to dinner.

CLARA.

Flora let the little note fall as if she disliked the touch of it. She was relieved to think she would not have to see Clara that day. It was her desire never to see Clara again. If only they could part here and now! How she wanted to shake the whole thing off her shoulders! How foolish not to have gone to Harry when she had first made up her mind to! For why, after all, make him any explanations? Suppose she should just take the ring to him and say: "It gives me the shivers, Harry. Let's take it back and get something else." If he didn't suspect the sapphire already, he would never suspect it from that.

But did she really want Harry to rid her of the ring? She would get hold of him first and then she would see what she would do.

She stepped into the hall with all the confidence of one who has fully made up her mind to carry matters with a high hand; but at the telephone she hesitated. Calling him up at such an hour of the morning demanding his attendance on such a fanciful errand—wouldn't he think it odd? No, he would think it the most natural thing in the world for her to be so flighty. Reassured, she gave the club number and stood waiting, listening to the half-syllables of switched-off voices and the crossing click, click, that was bringing her fate nearer to her. She heard some one coming up the stairs and down the hall toward her. Marrika stood stolid at her elbow.

"Mr. Cressy," she pronounced.

"Yes, yes," said Flora, with the club clamoring in her left ear.

"He is down-stairs," said Marrika.

Flora nearly let the receiver fall. Harry here? What a piece of luck! But here on his own account, at such an hour—how extraordinary!

"Hello, hello," persisted the club.

"What's wanted?"

"Why, I—!" Flora stammered. "It's a mistake; never mind. I don't want him now."

She hoped that Harry had not heard her as he came in, since it was his informal fashion to await her in the large entrance hall. She didn't want to spoil the chance he had given her of seeming off-hand about the ring. But the hall was empty, and as she descended the stairs she amused herself with the fancy that Shima had had a vision, and that she would still have to ring up the club and explain to the attendant that, after all, she wanted Mr. Cressy.

Then from the drawing-room threshold she caught sight of Harry standing in the big bay window of the drawing-room. In the same spot where Kerr had awaited her the afternoon before. Harry was tall and large and freshly colored, and yet he did not fill the room to her as the other man had done. He met her, kissed her, and she turned her head so that his lips met her cheek close beside her ear. She did not positively object to his kissing her on the lips, but her instinct was strong to offer him her cheek. He had sometimes laughed at this, but now he resented it. He insisted on his privilege, and she was passive to him, conscious of less love in this than assertion of possession.

"You are not going to Burlington, are you?" she asked him with her first breath.

He looked down at her with a flushed and sulky air. "What difference would that make to you? I am, as it happens, but I suppose you think that's no reason for disturbing you so early." He was angry, but at what, she wondered, with creeping uneasiness.

"What is the matter?" she urged.

"Are things going crookedly at Burlington?"

"Things are going as crooked as you please, but not at Burlington. Sit over there," he said, nodding toward the window-bench; "I want to talk to you."

Harry had the air of one about to scold, and certainly Flora thought if anybody was carrying matters with a high hand, it wasn't herself; but she didn't follow his direction. She continued to stand, while he, sitting on the table's edge, drumming the top of his hat, gloomily regarded her.

"Well?" she persisted, troubled by this look of his, and this silence.

"Look here," he began, "I have to be away a couple of days and I wish you'd do me a favor."

Flora's thought flew to the ring. Was he going to ask for it back, to have it reset, as he had promised on the threshold of the goldsmith's shop?

Here might be the chance she had hoped for of getting rid of it. She grasped at it before she had time to waver.

"I wonder if it's the very favor I was going to ask of you?"

But he didn't take it up. He seemed hardly to hear her, as if his mind was too much absorbed with quite another question—a question that the next moment came out flat. "What was that Kerr doing here yesterday?"

She was taken aback, so far had her apprehension of Harry's jealousy slipped into the background in the last 24 hours. But her consciousness that Harry was not behaving well, even for a jealous man, made her take it up all the more lightly.

"Why, he was calling, chatting, talking tea—what anybody else would do from four to six. What in the world gave you the idea that he was doing anything extraordinary?"

"Well," he said, "you shouldn't do the sort of thing that makes you talked about."

"That makes me talked about?" It made her pause in front of him.

"Why, yes, it isn't like you. It never happened before. Look here. I drop into the Bullers' yesterday; find Clara sidled up to the judge; look around for you. 'Hello,' I say, 'where's Flora?' 'Oh,' says she, 'Flora's at home amusing Mr. Kerr.' 'Amusing Mr. Kerr!'" he repeated. "That's a nice thing to hear."

Flora went red. She walked down the room from him to give her suddenly tumultuous heart time. However little he might guess the real trend of her interview with Kerr, she couldn't hear him come near it without apprehension. She was angry, helplessly angry at Harry that he had taken this moment for his stupid jealousy. But she was more angry at Clara, since such a speech on Clara's part wasn't carelessness.

She tried to laugh him out of it.

"Why, Harry, I never saw you jealous before!"

"It's all very well to say that—and you know I've never made a row about the other Johnnies. I knew you didn't care for any of them."

Her eyes narrowed and darkened.

"And you take it for granted I care for Mr. Kerr?"

"Oh, no, no!" He pushed his hand through his hair with an irascible gesture. "But it's plain enough you like him—you women always like a fellow that flourishes—but that's not the sort of man I care to see hanging around my girl."

Flora stood leaning on the table, breathing a little hurriedly, feeling rather as if she had been shaken.

Harry, standing with his hands in his pockets, looked not unlike the threatening image he had appeared in the back of the goldsmith's shop.

"Of course, the fellow can talk," he admitted, "and he has a manner. But Lord knows where he comes from or who he is. Why, even the Bullers don't know."

Flora turned sharply on him. "Who told you that?"

"The judge. He picked him up at the club."

"Well," she kept it up, "some one had to introduce him there."

Harry smiled. "You wouldn't care to bow to some of those club members."

"Harry, do you know how you sound to me?" She was trembling at the daring of what she was going to say. "You talk as if you knew something against him."

Her statement seemed to bring him up short. "No, no, I don't," he said hastily.

She made a little gesture of despair. How was she to count on Harry if he was going to behave like this? How trust him when he was shuffling so?

She made one more bold stroke to make him speak out.

"Harry, you do know something about him! I know you have seen him before."

"Why, yes, I've seen him before. But that's got nothing to do with it."

He looked surprised that she should seem to accuse him of it, and she wondered if he could have forgotten how he had denied it before.

"And that isn't why you distrust him?"

The devil's tattoo that he beat on his hat stopped.

"I don't distrust him."

"Well, dislike him, then. When was it you saw him before?"

"Isn't it enough for me to tell you that I don't want you to see him?"

"Oh!" She turned away from him. Every nerve in her was in revolt. Then he really wasn't going to tell her anything. He was keeping her out of it as if she were a child. She had relied on him to return the ring. She had counted upon his indifference and good nature. And he was neither indifferent nor good-natured. All desire of even mentioning the ring to him left her; and as to giving him her confidence—these hints that he had thrown out about Kerr—they might be mere jealousy—but he might have actual knowledge, knowledge that, with her own fitted to it, would make for him a complete figure. She caught her breath at the thought of how near she had come to actually betraying Kerr. Until that moment she had not realized that through all her waverings her one fixed intention had been not to betray him.

Harry had risen and was buttoning his overcoat. "You know you're never at home if you don't want to be," he said.

She stood misleadingly drooping before him. But though her appearance was passive enough for the most exacting lover her will had never been in more vigorous revolt. She knew Harry was taking her weariness for acquiescence, and she let him take it so. She even followed him into the hall, and with a vague idea of further propitiation, nodded away Shima and opened the door for him herself.

The fog was a chasm of white outside. Harry turned on the brink of it.

"By the way, where's Clara?"

"Why, do you want to see her? She will be out all day. She's dining with the Willie Herricks."

"No, I don't want to see her, but, by the way, she's not dining with the Willie Herricks; she's dining with the Bullers. I heard her make the engagement yesterday."

"Oh, no, Harry, I'm sure you're mistaken."

"Well, it doesn't matter. All I want to know is, why did you show that ring to Clara before it was set?"

She was genuinely aghast. "I did not," she flashed. "What made you think I had?"

He shrugged. "Well, she asked me where we got it. I don't see why women always talk those things over."

He was looking at her inquiringly.

"Well, I haven't," she said quickly. "Have you?"

He looked out upon the fog. "Told her where we got it, do you mean? No, I just chafed her. I'd look out, if I were you. She strikes me as damned curious."

He stood a moment on the threshold, looking from Flora to the chasm of fog outside, as if he were choosing between two chances.

"I think I'll take that ring this morning," he said slowly.

The deliberate words came to her with a shock. But in the moment, while she looked into Harry's moody face, she realized how impossible to make a scene over what must still be maintained as a trivial matter between them—the mere resetting of a jewel; what should she do to put him off? She looked up at him and saw with relief that his face was turned from her to the fog, as if he had forgotten her. Then, still with averted head, as if he addressed the white-ness, or himself,—"No," he determined, "I won't. I'll take it when I come back."

He pulled himself together with an effort, with a smile. "That is," he turned to her, "if you're in no great hurry about the setting? Very well, then. In a day or two."

He plunged away into the fog. A few rods from the door he disappeared, but she could still hear his footsteps growing thinner, lighter, passing away in the whiteness.

CHAPTER XIV.

She stood where he had left her in the open doorway, with the damp and dy of the fog blowing on her. She had had a narrow escape; but after the first fullness of her relief there returned upon her again the weight of her responsibility. There was no slipping out of it now, and it was going to be worse than she had imagined. So much had come out in the last half-hour that she felt bewildered by it. What Harry had let slip about Clara alarmed her. What in the world was Clara about? With one well-aimed observation she had stirred up Harry against Kerr and against Flora herself. And meanwhile she was running after the Bullers. Twice in two days, if Harry was not mistaken, and she was even nearing another engagement.

After all her fruitless mousings, Clara had too evidently got on the scent of something at last. How much she knew or guessed as yet, Flora could not be sure, but certainly, now, she couldn't let Clara go. For that would be turning adrift a dangerous person with a stronger motive than ever for pursuing her quest, and the opportunity for pursuing it unobserved, out of Flora's sight. Clara was at it even now, and the only consolation Flora had was that Harry, at least, would not play into her hands.

For Harry had a special secret interest of his own. The last ten minutes of their interview had made that plain. His manner, when he had declared his intention of taking the ring, had been anything but the manner of a care-free lover merely concerned with pleasing his lady. Then they were all of them racing each other for the same thing—the thing she held in her possession; and whether she feared most to be felled by a blow from Harry, or hunted far afield by Kerr, or trapped by Clara, she could not tell. She stood hesitating, looking out into the obscurity of the fog, as if she hoped to read the answer there. Presently she returned to the fact that Shima was waiting to close the door. Half-way across the hall she paused again, looking thoughtfully down the rose-colored vista of the drawing-room, and up at the broad black march of the stair. Vague mysteries peered at her from every side. Which should she flee from? Which walk boldly up to and dispel?

She went up-stairs slowly. She stood in her dressing-room absently before the mirror. She touched the hard, unyielding stone of the ring under the thin bodice of her gown. She recalled the morning when she had gone to get it, before anything had happened and the lure of life had been so exquisite.

And yet she didn't wish herself back, but only forward. Now she had no leisure to imagine, to pretend, to enjoy, only the breathless sense that she must get forward. The chattering clock on her mantel warned her of the passing time and set her hurrying into her walking gown, her hat, her gloves, as if the object of her errand would only wait for her a moment longer. When, for the second time, she opened the house door, she didn't hesitate. She descended into the white fog that covered all the city.

Above her the stone facade of her house loomed huge and pinkish in the mist. Her spirits rose with the feeling that she was going adventuring again, leaving that house where for the last two days she had awaited events with such vivid apprehensions. She hurried fast down the damp, glistening pavement, seeing long, dim gray faces of houses glimmer by, seeing figures come toward her through the fog, grow vivid, pass, and hearing at intervals the hoarse, lonely voice of the fog-horn at "The Heads," reaching her from over many intervening hills. She did not feel sure what she should do at the end of her journey or what awaited her there. She knew herself a most unpracticed hunter, she, who all her life had been the most artful of quarryers.

She turned in at the low gate of imitation grill in front of an enormous wooden mansion, with towers and cupolas painted all a chill slate gray, with fuchsias, purple and red, clambering up the front. She rang, and was admitted into a hall, ornate and very high, with a wide staircase sweeping down into the middle of it. The maid looked dubiously at Flora and thought Miss Buller was not at home, but would see. Flora turned into the room on her left and sat down among the Louis Quinze sofas and potted palms with a feeling that Miss Buller was at home, and for one reason or another, preferred not to be seen. She waited apprehensively, wondering whether Ella was not seeing the world-in-general, or had really specified against herself. Could it be that Ella was one of those women whom Harry had alluded to as running after Kerr? In the short 24 hours every individual help she had counted upon had seemed to draw away from her—Kerr, whose understanding she had been so sure of; Clara, whose propriety had never failed; Harry, whose comfortable good nature she had so taken for granted! It seemed as if the sapphire, whose presence she was never unconscious of, for all she wore it out of sight, had a power like the evil eye over these people. But if it could turn such as Ella against her, why, the Brussels carpet beneath her might well open and let her down to deeper abysses than Judge Buller's wine-cellar.

She started nervously at the step of the maid returning. The message brought was unexpected. "Miss Buller says will you please walk up-stairs?"

Flora was amazed. That invitation would have been odd enough at any time, for she and Ella were hardly on such intimate footing. But now she was ushered up the majestic stair, and from the majestic upper hall abruptly into a wild little cluttered sewing-room, and thence into a wilder but more spacious bedroom, large curtains at the windows, large roses on the carpet, and over all objects in the room a clutter of miscellaneous articles, as if Ella's band-boxes, bureaus and work-baskets habitually refused to contain themselves.

From the midst of this Ella confronted her, still in her "wrapper" and with the large puff of her hair a little awry. Under it her face was curiously pink, a color deepening to the tip of her nose and puffing out under her eyes.

"Well, Flora," she greeted her guest. "You were just the person I wanted to see. Sit down. No, not there—that's my bird of paradise feather! Oh, no, not there—that's the breakfast. Well, I guess you'll have to sit on the bed."

Flora swept aside the clothes that streamed across it and throned herself on the edge of the high, white plateau of Ella's four-poster. Ella, for all her eager greeting, looked upon her friend doubtfully, and Flora recognized in herself a similar hesitation, as if each were trying to make out, without asking, what thoughts the other harbored.

"I was afraid I shouldn't see you at all," Flora began at last.

"Well, you wouldn't if it hadn't happened to be you," said Ella paradoxically. "Look at me; did you ever see such a sight?"

"You don't look very well," Flora cautiously admitted. "Why, Ella, you have been crying!"

"Yes, I've been crying," said Ella, mopping her nose, which still showed a tendency to distill a tear at its tip. "And it's perfectly awful to me to think you've been living so long in the same house with her."

Flora murmured breathlessly: "What in the world do you mean?"

"If you don't know, I certainly ought to tell you. I mean Clara," said Ella distinctly.

Flora, sitting up on the edge of the high bed with the tips of her little shoes hardly touching the floor, looked at Ella fascinated, her lips a little apart. Ella had so exactly pronounced her own secret thought of Clara. She was breathless to know what had been Clara's performance at the Bullers'.

"Of course I've always known she was like that," said Ella, leaning back in her chair with an air of resignation. "She's always getting something. It's awful. It was the same even when we were at boarding-school. I suppose she never did have enough money, though her people were awfully nice; but she worked us all for invitations and rides in our carriages, and I remember she got lots through Lillie Lewis' elder brother, and he thought she was going to marry him, but she didn't. She married Lulu Britton's father; and I guess she worked him until he went under and they found there really was no money. So she's been living on people ever since." Ella rocked gloomily.

"But she does it so nicely," Flora suggested. She still had the feeling that it was not decent to own up to these most secret facts of people's failings.

"Oh, yes, she's a perfect wonder," Ella admitted grudgingly; "look at what she's done for you!" Ella's gentleness was eloquent of how much that had been. "But don't you imagine she cares about you any more than she cares about me?" Ella began to cry again. "You were an awfully good thing for her, Flora, and now that you're going to be married she's got to have somebody else. But I do think she might have taken somebody besides papa."

Flora gasped. "Taken!" Ella, what do you mean?"

"I mean married," said Ella.

"Married!" For the time Flora had become a helpless echo.

"Oh, not yet," Ella defiantly nodded. "Not while there's anything left of me."

Flora stammered. "Oh, Ella, no. Oh, Ella, are you sure?" She felt a hysterical impulse to giggle.

"Well, I'd like to know why?" Ella snapped. "I'm sure papa is twice as rich as old Britton was, and twice as easy." She went off into sobs behind her handkerchief.

"Oh, don't, Ella, don't cry!" Flora begged, petting the large expanse of heaving shoulders. "I didn't mean anything. I was just silly. Of course it may be that she wants to marry him. But she never has before—at least, I mean, I don't believe she wants to now. What makes you think she does? What has she done?"

"Well," Ella burst out, "why is she coming here all the time, when she never used to, and petting papa? Why does she bother to be so agreeable to me when she never was before? Why does she make me ask her to dinner, when I don't want to?"

Each question knocked on Flora's brain to the accompaniment of Ella's furious rocking. She could not answer them, and Ella's explanation, absurd as it seemed, coming on top of her high expectations, wasn't impossible. It was like Clara to have more than one iron in the fire; but when Flora remembered the passionate intensity with which Clara had demolished the order of her room, she couldn't believe that Clara would pause in the midst of such pursuit to pounce on Judge Buller.

"Oh, Ella," Flora sympathetically urged, "I don't believe there's really any danger. And surely, even if she meant it, Judge Buller would be—"

"Oh, yes, he would," Ella cut her short. "Why, when she came yesterday he was just going out, and she went for him and made him stop to tea. Think of it—papa stopping to tea! And he was as pleased as Punch to have her make up to him. He has not the least idea of what she's after. Papa isn't used to ladies. He's always just lived with me."

This astonishing statement looking at Flora through Ella's unsuspecting eyes had nevertheless a pathos of its own.

"But I'll tell you one thing," Ella ended, still rocking vigorously; "if she comes here to-night to dinner when she knows I don't want her I shall tell her what I think of her, before she leaves this house! See if I don't!"

"Don't do that, Ella," Flora entreated, "that would be awful." She was certain that such an interview would only end in Clara's making Ella more ridiculous than she was already. "Let me speak to her. I don't mind at all," she declared bravely, and in a manner truly, though she was fully aware that speaking to Clara would be anything but a treat.

"Oh, would you?" said Ella eagerly. "I really would be awfully obliged. I hated to ask you, Flora, but I thought perhaps you might be able to—to, well, perhaps be able to do something," she ended vaguely. "Do you think you could?"

"I'll speak to Clara to-night," said Flora heroically, "or to-morrow," she added; "I'm afraid I won't see her to-night."

A LITTLE TOO PRIMITIVE

Shower Bath Arrangement Something of a Shock to the Participant.

August Belmont, at a dinner in Saratoga, praised the seaside towns of New England.

"But some of them," he added, "are a little too primitive. I remember a story about the primitive town of Rockford. Rockford had a rough bathing establishment, with a shower bath. You stood in your bathhouse and pulled a rope and a deluge of cool water descended from the ceiling.

"Well, a lady visitor stood one day in her bathhouse, ready for the shower. She pulled the rope and braced herself, but no shower followed. She gave the rope another tug, when the gruff voice of the sailor proprietor of the establishment sounded from aloft.

"Stand a pint more to the north-east, mum," it said, "if ye want to get the full force."

"And the horrified lady, looking up, saw the old sailor frowning impatiently through a hole in the ceiling and tilting a barrel of sea water for the shower."

WASTED A FORTUNE ON SKIN TROUBLE

"I began to have an itching over my whole body about seven years ago and this settled in my limbs, from the knee to the toes. I went to see a great many physicians, a matter which cost me a fortune, and after I noticed that I did not get any relief that way, I went for three years to the hospital. But they were unable to help me there, I used all the medicines that I could see but became worse and worse. I had an inflammation which made me almost crazy with pain. When I showed my foot to my friends they would get really frightened. I did not know what to do. I was so sick and had become so nervous that I positively lost all hope.

"I had seen the advertisement of the Cuticura Remedies a great many times, but could not make up my mind to buy them, for I had already used so many medicines. Finally I did decide to use the Cuticura Remedies and I tell you that I was never so pleased as when I noticed that, after having used two sets of Cuticura Soap, Cuticura Ointment and Cuticura Pills, the entire inflammation had gone. I was completely cured. I should be only too glad if people with similar disease would come to me and find out the truth. I would only recommend them to use Cuticura. Mrs. Bertha Sachs, 1621 Second Ave., New York, N. Y., Aug. 20, 1909."

"Mrs. Bertha Sachs is my sister-in-law and I know well how she suffered and was cured by Cuticura Remedies after many other treatments failed. Morris Sachs, 321 E. 89th St., New York, N. Y., Secretary of Deutsch-Ostrower Unt-Verein, Kempner Hebrew Benevolent Society, etc."

Managing a Husband.

Men are like children; they want managing, although you must never let them dream that you think so. No child likes to be ordered about, no man will endure coercion. But managing! It is an art so subtle, so elusive, that few women understand even the rudiments of it. Sisters mine, let us reason together, says Woman's Life. In every human being there is a spark of the divine; it is yours to fan that spark into a flame—that is managing a man—it is to get the very best out of him there is to have, and not two women in ten can do it.

Do not think that there is anything unworthy in managing a man—to bring out the best is a high vocation. Only let us see to it that we are worthy of it. There are women who have made angels of men, but at the cost of their own divinity. There is room for more than one unselfish person in a family.

Editorial Favor.

"A month ago you rejected a story of mine."

"I remember. Thought it was rotten."

"I had offered it for $7, and you turned it down."

"So I did."

"Well, I sold that story for $40. Here's another story. May I ask the favor of one more rejection? It seems to help."

MANUEL IS EXILED

PORTUGAL'S THRONE FALLS AND REPUBLIC IS PROCLAIMED.

MANY KILLED IN FIGHTING

Revolution Breaks Out in Lisbon—Army and Navy Join Revolt—Theophile Braga is Head of New Government—King Safe.

Lisbon.—Portugal's capital is now completely in the hands of the Republicans, who have proclaimed a republic with Theophile Braga as president.

A new national flag of red and green flies over all the public buildings, including the town hall. The warships greeted the hoisting of the republican flag with salvos of artillery.

It is impossible to estimate the number of killed and wounded in the fighting, but it is expected to reach one hundred or more.

The city has been considerably damaged by bombardment.

Public Order is Restored.

Public order has been restored and the populace are peacefully celebrating the advent of the republic proclaimed. The government forces surrendered only after they had been bombarded by the joint army and navy forces of the revolutionists.

King Manuel, Queen Mother Amelle and other members of the royal family went aboard the royal yacht Queen Amelle and sailed for Gibraltar, where they placed themselves under the protection of the British government.

The provisional government after its first council issued an edict to the people commanding them to preserve order and respect the persons and property of both Portuguese and foreigners, no matter what their rank or political or religious opinions might be.

Outbreak Started Tuesday.

The outbreak started Tuesday in Lisbon. The plans of the revolutionists had been laid so carefully that the government was taken by surprise, although it was generally known that the country was in a state of extreme unrest and on the verge of an armed uprising.

With sunrise the undercurrent of unrest which had been felt in the city for weeks came to a sudden climax. Crowds gathered in the streets, and when ordered to disperse by the gendarmes attacked the police officers and put them to flight.

Rebels Fill the Streets.

Before noon thousands of revolutionists were on the streets, many of them fully armed. Shouts for the overthrow of King Manuel and his cabinet filled the air.

At the first signal the men aboard the warships in the harbor overpowered the few officers who were not parties to the plot and trained the guns on the royal palace. The bombardment was begun and lasted until the small garrison was forced to surrender to the thousands who clamored at the gates.

38 KILLED, 26 HURT

TRACTION CARS ON M'KINLEY SYSTEM COLLIDE NEAR STAUNTON, ILL.

ONE CREW OVERLOOKS ORDERS

Two Coaches Running at High Rate of Speed, Heavily Loaded With Human Freight, Crash Into Each Other on Curve.

Carlinville, Ill.—In a head-on collision Tuesday afternoon between two interurban cars on the Illinois Traction line (the McKinley system) thirty-eight persons were killed and twenty-six were injured two miles north of Staunton, Ill. Three of the injured are not expected to live.

Both cars were going at a high rate of speed and as the curve where they met is at the bottom of a hill, both cars were plunging down hill. They met right on the curve and so sudden was the collision, the motormen barely escaped with their lives by jumping.

Both cars were demolished and the dead, dying and injured were piled in one bloody mass, while the screams of the maimed and bleeding added horror to the scene.

Car No. 14, north-bound, had orders to meet both sections of train No. 73 at Staunton. The orders were carried out so far as the first section was concerned, but it is officially reported that the orders to wait for the second section of No. 73 were overlooked.

Old employees of the company refused to go out on learning of the wreck. They complained that new men, employed for the state fair traffic, were disobeying orders and running by switches where they were under orders to stop. It is reported that four full crews mutinied and refused to go out. The system has been taxed to its extreme capacity since last Saturday by the immense crowds hastening to the state fair. Many additional men, mostly motormen and conductors employed in various cities of central Illinois, have been pressed into service on the high speed crowded interurban cars.

The Killed:

W. S. Street, Staunton, division superintendent Illinois Traction system.

A. Price, Champaign, auditor of disbursements of the Illinois Traction system.

Echenle, Belleville, Ill., in pocket.

The special train from Staunton bearing 28 of the dead was sent to Carlinville. So badly mangled are some of the bodies that they cannot be recognized even by those who are sure they have relatives among the unidentified. Most of those killed were riding in the south-bound car, which was almost completely telescoped by the north-bound car.

The scenes attending the wreck are indescribable in their horrors as the injured screamed for help while pinned beneath the wreckage. The few who escaped without injuries heroically went to work in the mangled mass of bleeding bodies, and endeavored to extricate the dead from the drying and injured.

A large number of the injured were taken to Granite City and attended in hospitals there.

WHY NEW ORLEANS

CITY IS LOGICAL POINT FOR WORLD'S PANAMA EXPOSITION.

Public sentiment has decided that the completion of the Panama Canal in 1915 shall be celebrated with a great international Exposition in which all the nations of the world may participate; and the question of where this Exposition is to be held will be settled by Congress at its approaching session.

New Orleans and San Francisco are contending for the honor of holding this Exposition, and both cities have guaranteed immense sums of money as an evidence of their ability to finance so great an enterprise.

An Exposition worthy of the term "World's Fair," such as New Orleans proposes to build, will be a great educational movement. Its success as such, however, will depend entirely upon the percentage of our population who can secure its educational advantages, this in turn, depends upon its location, as the time in traveling to and from the Exposition, and the cost in railroad and Pullman fares, are the most important factors.

Considering these matters, New Orleans' claims to being the "Logical Point" for this Panama Exposition, seem to be fully substantiated by the following facts:—

New Orleans is 500 miles from the center of population in the United States. San Francisco is 2,500 miles distant therefrom.

Within a radius of 500 miles from New Orleans there are 17,500,000 people. Within the same radius from San Francisco there are only 2,000,000.

Within a radius of 1,000 miles from New Orleans, there are 65,000,000. Within the same radius from San Francisco there are only 6,000,000.

At an average of 900 miles from New Orleans, there are 70 of our principal cities with a combined population of 20,000,000. Averaging 900 miles from San Francisco there are only 8 large cities, with a combined population of just 1,000,000. The average distance of all these cities to New Orleans is 792 miles, to San Francisco 2,407 miles.

Over 75 per cent. of the people of the United States could go to an Exposition there at an average expense for railroad fare of $12.50, as against an average of $37.50 to the Pacific Coast; and for several millions of our people, the Pullman fare and Dining Car expenses alone, for a trip to San Francisco, would amount to more than all their transportation expenses for a trip to New Orleans.

This is an important public question to be settled by Congress at the session which convenes in December.

Many of our readers will wish to visit this World's Panama Exposition, and if held in New Orleans a great many more could spare the time and money for the trip than could go to San Francisco. Therefore, we urge our readers to write to the two senators from this State and the congressman from this district, requesting them to support New Orleans in the contest.

Mrs. Briggs' Speech.

If brevity is the soul of wit, one of the wittiest speeches on record was made by a woman. Mrs. Briggs lived in the northern part of Indiana, a long distance from any village. Hearing that the Rev. Mr. Goodwin was to preach in a township some twenty miles distant, she resolved to be present, and as no other way offered, she walked the twenty miles.

The pastor heard of this and was so pleased at the appreciation which it showed that at the close of the sermon he mentioned the fact to the congregation, and called upon Mrs. Briggs to tell them how she came.

Rising slowly, she looked over the audience with great solemnity, and said:

"I hoofed it."

Then she sat down again.—Youth's Companion.

Queer Questions.

Queer questions come over the telephone to the newspaper offices. Here was one that the man who chanced to answer the phone had put up to him the other day:

"Say," began the unknown seeker after the truth, "do you—do you remember who it was that killed Abel?"

"Why, Cain, of course," replied the newspaper man, who put in several years at Sunday school. "Who'd I suppose?"

"Well," observed the man at the other end in an annoyed tone, "doggon if I ain't gone and made a fool of myself. Course it was Cain, now that you mention it, but I made a two to one bet with a fellow that 'twas Gollath, and now I'll have to go without a new overcoat, I reckon, this next winter."—Cleveland Plain Dealer

PROMINENT PEOPLE

CAREER OF ONE KENTUCKIAN

From the forests and the mountains of Kentucky to the position of secretary of state at Frankfort; from the state capitol to a state cell; from the grated cell to the very shadow of the gallows; from the shadow of the gallows again to the grated cell; from the grated cell back to the forests and the mountains of Kentucky; from the forests and mountains to the halls of congress at Washington. This in brief is the history of Caleb Powers. He has been chosen as the Republican candidate for congress from his district, which is strongly Republican.

Seldom does a human life contain so much of struggle for advancement from humble beginnings, so much of tragedy and of pathos and so remarkable a rehabilitation in public honor. Caleb Powers will be a remarkable figure in Washington, because of the fact that for eight long years he was immured in a prison cell fighting to escape life imprisonment or execution for a crime of which half the people of Kentucky believe him guilty and the other half believe him absolutely innocent.

The minds of newspaper readers will instantly go back to that tragic day in January, 1900, when William Goebel was ruthlessly shot down from ambush as he was walking toward the state capitol at Frankfort. Goebel and W. S. Taylor, the former a Democrat and the latter a Republican, had been opposing candidates for governor and each claimed election. Taylor was given the certificate of election and in possession of the capitol and Caleb Powers was his secretary of state. As Goebel, whom the legislature on contest had declared to be elected, walked across the grounds leading to the capitol he was shot from the window of the office of the secretary of state. The murder created a national sensation and for many years the state of Kentucky was split into two bitter factions.

Following the tragedy there came a succession of trials in the course of which several men were found guilty of complicity in the murder and at least one—Henry E. Youtsey—is now serving a life sentence.

Caleb Powers was tried for murder and was sentenced to imprisonment for life. He appealed, and a second trial resulted in another conviction and a second sentence to life imprisonment. A third trial followed, and this time he was sentenced to be hanged. On the fourth trial the jury disagreed, the majority being for acquittal.

Meantime eight years had rolled around and Powers was still in a prison cell at Georgetown. A petition containing the names of hundreds of thousands of persons both in Kentucky and elsewhere was presented to the governor and in 1908 Governor Willson granted Powers a full pardon.

GOTHAM'S QUEEN OF SILENCE

Mrs. Isaac L. Rice, the New York society woman who fought single-handed to suppress unnecessary noise in the metropolis and who accomplished so much through her determination, is known as the "Queen of Silence." Mrs. Rice has long been a sworn enemy of noise. Her beautiful Venetian palace on Riverside drive is so located that, until she began her battle and won out her ears were continually ringing with the shrieks of the switch engines on the railroad tracks that line the river front and with the clamor of boat whistles. Along the East river are located two-thirds of the hospitals of the city and this thoughtful woman realized what extra suffering the sick must endure because of the nerve-racking clamor. She began to gather evidence to prove her point and with the aid of Columbia university students, who followed the boats and kept count, learned that there were about 5,000 unnecessary but deafening shrieks each night in the harbor. The harbor men were pleased to take umbrage at her interference and proceeded to make life miserable for her till she secured law on her side. During the night boats passing her home serenaded her with the most horrible whistles and focused their flashlights upon the house.

Nothing daunted, the plucky woman secured an order from the secretary of commerce and labor forbidding unnecessary whistling on the river. The harbor men persisting in their defiance, she had one man arrested, then another, until finally the racket was quelled. This was only the beginning, however. Mrs. Rice had gained the sympathy of all peace-loving citizens and the Society for the Suppression of Unnecessary Noise was organized. City officials were interested and the fight continued against all superfluous racket. Peddlers, drivers, street organs, flat-wheeled cars and noisy youths all came in for a share of attention. Zones of quiet were drawn around hospitals and at last peace reigned as much as possible in a huge city where a certain amount of noise is unavoidable. The good work has been continued and has spread not only to other cities in this country, but has been taken up in European countries.

J. A. TAWNEY OF MINNESOTA

An insurgent victory that has attracted a good deal of attention throughout the country was the defeat in the primaries of Representative James A. Tawney, who was a candidate for renomination in the first congressional district of Minnesota. Tawney is one of the most influential representatives in congress, is chairman of the committee on appropriations. A most determined fight was waged against his renomination and the insurgents had the support and advice of Roosevelt, Pinchot, James J. Heney and other exponents of progressive Republicanism.

In his early days Tawney was a blacksmith and machinist, learning the trades in Pennsylvania, where he was born in 1855, near the village of Gettysburg. Subsequently he removed to Winona, Minn., where he worked four years at the bar, was later sent to the state senate, and in 1892 was elected to congress, in which he has since served.

Tawney is a dark, almost swarthy man, with a piercing black eye and a black mustache, now streaked with gray. When Cannon made him chairman of the committee on appropriations he did so because of the strength of character and firmness which Tawney had displayed. Often the speaker referred to him as the "man of iron," a not unfitting title. As chairman of the appropriations committee Tawney was regarded as the watchdog of the treasury, but he was one of the strongest stand-patters in the house, and hence the declaration of war upon him by the insurgents.

STARTED 'BEEF TRUST' QUIZ

Judge Konesaw Mountain Landis of the United States district court in Chicago, who started the latest investigation of the "beef trust," is the same who imposed the $29,000,000 fine on the Standard Oil company a few years ago. His father served during the civil war in the regiment which was commanded by Judge Walter Q. Gresham, secretary of state under Cleveland, and was wounded in the battle of Konesaw mountain. Hence the peculiar name of Judge Landis.

When Gresham was secretary of state Judge Landis, then a young Chicago lawyer, served as his private secretary. Afterward he returned to Chicago to practise his profession and was later elevated to the bench.

Of the ten indicted meat packers, charged by the federal grand jury with violation of the Sherman anti-trust law, seven have given bonds in the total sum of $210,000 for their appearance for trial when the cases against them are called.

The fight thus begun against the meat packers promises to be one of life or death for the huge corporation, which, it has been charged repeatedly, controls the meat industry in this country.

Judge Landis is a young man with an old man's manner. He wears long hair, talks with a drawl and his language is picturesque.

LORIMER QUIZ ENDS

SENATORIAL COMMITTEE CONCLUDES TAKING OF TESTIMONY AT CHICAGO.

MAY SIT AT WASHINGTON

Further Meeting Will Depend Whether Representative Wilson, Regarded as Important Witness, Can Be Found—Shurtleff Testifies.

Chicago.—The senatorial subcommittee which is investigating the election of United States Senator Lorimer concluded its session in Chicago Saturday without hearing arguments.

Before the report on Mr. Lorimer's right to his seat is presented to the full committee on privileges and elections, by which the seven investigators were delegated, there is the prospect of further sittings at Washington preceding the convening of congress next December. Moreover, it is possible that additional testimony will be heard.

This will depend in part upon whether Representative Robert E. Wilson, now in hiding, is found by the deputy United States marshals, who have been hunting for him to serve him with a subpoena.

Chairman Burrows made plain that he was regarded as a highly desirable witness, whose absence at this time suggested special reasons for securing his presence and testimony.

Speaker Edward D. Shurtleff was slated one of the last witnesses heard. Mr. Shurtleff denied paying or receiving money "or other valuable thing" in consideration of voting for Lorimer. Most of his testimony was devoted to apportioning the house legislators into factional groups.

Up to the last moment there was uncertainty as to whether Senator Lorimer would be a witness, but he did not go on the stand.

All members of the senate committee left for their homes Sunday.

MANY DIE IN FOREST FIRES

Four Towns on Canadian Border Are Known to Have Been Destroyed—Others Endangered.

Winnipeg, Man.—At least sixty persons are believed to have died in forest fires which are burning along the international boundary line throughout the Rainy river district.

Four towns in northern Minnesota are known to have been destroyed. They are Beaudette, Gracetown, Pitt and Spooner, all in Minnesota. There was heavy loss of life in these towns.

The towns of Roosevelt, Swift and Cedar Spur are in great danger of being wiped out at almost any hour, and there have been many small blazes hourly in Rainy River, in Canada, just across the river from Beaudette. These have been extinguished without serious damage thus far.

The blaze has covered an immense territory, and practically all of the woods between Warroad, Minn., and International Falls are ablaze.

Millions of dollars' worth of standing timber has been destroyed and thousands of settlers are left homeless and penniless.

BLAST ENTRAPS MANY MINERS

Explosion of Gas in Colorado Shaft Cuts Men Off From Outer World.

Trinidad, Col.—Fifty-two miners, nearly all Americans, are walled up in the Colorado Fuel & Iron company's coal mine at Starkville, seven miles south of here, by an explosion caused by accumulation of gas.

Immediately upon receipt of the report a special train was made up here carrying doctors, nurses, volunteer rescue parties, and newspaper men.

Ample galleries in the mine are relied upon to afford the men fresh air and possible means of escape. The workings are enormous and are reported to connect with the Englewood mine, and possibly others. Unless these connections are blocked through disease or choked by debris from the explosion it is thought the men have an excellent chance for life.

The mine is widely known because of the small percentage of foreigners employed in it and is used to supply the Santa Fe railroad in this part of the country.

Tells of Plot to Kill Taft.

Millbury, Mass.—An alleged scheme for the assassination of President Taft was unfolded Saturday to Miss Della C. Torrey, aunt of the president, by a stranger who called at her home. The man, who refused to give his name, claimed to have overheard the plotters in Boston. As he departed he threatened to return and kill Miss Torrey if the matter got into the newspapers. The man disappeared from Millbury and there is no clue to his whereabouts.

She Has Changed Her Opinion.

"I hear your maiden aunt is visiting you."

"Yes. Came yesterday."

"How long does she expect to stay?"

"Oh, I don't know—probably for some time."

"I feel sorry for your wife. I believe I heard her say not long ago that she despised the old lady."

"She used to, but she has changed her opinion—in fact, has great respect for her now. Aunt Hetty brought three trunks, two of them filled with things she smuggled in from Europe."

Telephonic Reply.

The elderly stranger, by invitation of the superintendent, was addressing the Sunday school.

"How many can tell me," he asked "which is the longest chapter in the Bible?"

Many hands went up.

"This little boy may answer," he said, pointing his finger at an urchin in one of the seats near the front.

"Which is the longest chapter in the Bible?"

"Psalm double one nine!" shouted Tommy Tucker.

DAME NATURE HINTS

When the Food is Not Suited.

When Nature gives her signal that something is wrong it is generally with the food. The old Dame is always faithful and one should act at once.

To put off the change is to risk that which may be irreparable. An Arizona man says:

"For years I could not safely eat any breakfast. I tried various kinds of breakfast food, but they were all soft, starchy messes which gave me distressing headaches. I drank strong coffee, too, which appeared to benefit me at the time, but added to the headaches afterwards. Toast and coffee were no better, for I found the toast very constipating."

"A friend persuaded me to quit the old coffee and the starchy breakfast foods, and use Postum and Grape-Nuts instead. I shall never regret taking his advice. I began using them three months ago."

"The change they have worked in me is wonderful. I now have no more of the distressing sensations in my stomach after eating, and I never have headaches. I have gained 12 pounds in weight and feel better in every way."

"Grape-Nuts make a delicious as well as a nutritious dish, and I find that Postum is easily digested and never produces dyspepsia symptoms."

"There's a Reason."

SAID BY THE YOUNGSTERS

Some Bright Remarks Worth Preserving, That Have Fallen From Childish Lips.

A little girl, after listening to the hymn, "In heaven there stands an ever open door," remarked that there must be two heavens, "cause grand-ma'd never had any open door where she is." And a dear little country laddie, visiting a city Sunday school and hearing about the "many mansions" of the better land, later explained that they had been "studying all about 'Paradise Flats.'"

Eccelesiastical modes and matters frequently are puzzling to the little ones. A small Chicago citizen was taken to a fine church, where the music, windows, furnishings, and all accessories were as impressive as the building.

The minister, living up to his enviable reputation as an orator, indulged in a brilliant rhetorical flight.

"I know," he declared, "who glides the sun and slivers the stars and paints the flowers and tints the sky and lends to the rivers their beauty, to the ocean its glory, to the skies their perfect light," and so on through long and effective periods.

Finally came the interrogatory climax: "Who is it, my friends, who performs all these wonders? Who is it? Who?"

From the front pew where the baby lister had been all eager attention came a shrill, disappointed pipe: "You said you knew!"
